Work Relief Drive by U. S. Is Advocated By LaGuardia

New York Mayor Urges Federal Control of Aid Program.

Favors Uniform Security Formula

Says Vast Public Spending Is Necessary to Fight Recession.

By Sidney Olson.

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, jutted an aggressive underlip at the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday in sounding the keynote of big-city demands on the Government—a vast extension of work relief to end the business recession.

The short, plump "Little Flower," garbed soberly in black serge, perched himself precariously on the edge of the witness chair, his chubby little hands clenched prayerfully before him, and asked:

Federal initiation of another tremendous public works program;

Administration of work-relief by the Government directly to the cities, without State governments acting between the two;

Action by business to keep prices down;

Uniformity throughout the Nation of Social Security and unemployment compensation laws, and passage of a uniform wage-hour law;

That New York City be accorded the "same treatment and the same formula" under which relief is administered to less populous States.

Other Mayors Support Him.

The doughty little mayor's recommendations, in nearly all respects, were concurred in and supplemented by three other big-city mayors who testified yesterday:

Richard W. Reading of Detroit, Angelo J. Rossi of San Francisco and Harold H. Burton of Cleveland.

LaGuardia struck at business and industry for "missing the ball" when the Administration was engaged in fighting the depression with pump-priming activities. He said he did not mean business should do anything at a loss, but that "they should have co-operated to keep prices down during that period. Then we would not have had that sudden drop."

He told Committee Chairman James F. Byrnes, South Carolina Democrat, that "a great mistake is being made in Washington these days, by calling in the so-called great business men to give their ideas on recovery. They're all sellers, they're not buyers.

"The ones that should be asked are the buyers, the farmers, and the wage-earners. Asking these businessmen is a waste of time."

"Some of the people who criticize the Government spending the most now," said the Mayor, alternately snatching off and replacing at odd angles his horn-rimmed glasses, "were very silent while Government buying was going on.

"You know, this talk about balancing the budget is also greatly confused. Balancing the budget does not bring about recovery—recovery brings about a balanced budget."

LaGuardia, as well as Burton and Reading stressed the necessity for

Brother Pays $100 Speeding Fine on First Lady's Car

Baltimore, Jan. 17 (AP).—G. Hall Roosevelt, brother of the President's wife, paid a $100 fine levied against the driver of her automobile—she was not in it—for speeding, State Policeman C. V. Maine said today.

Maine said he and Patrolman J. R. Buckworth stopped the car on the Baltimore-Philadelphia road Saturday night after a 3-mile chase. He said the car, driven by Alfred Pinto, Mrs. Roosevelt's chauffeur, "did 80 miles an hour."

Hoovers Unhurt In Car Accident

Santa Cruz, Calif., Jan. 17 (AP).—Former President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover escaped without injury, a traffic accident report disclosed today, when their automobile crashed through a fence and into a grove of eucalyptus trees near here yesterday. The accident was caused by a tire blowout.

Roosevelt Will Meet Auto Leaders Friday

President Invites Eight Executives to White House as He Resumes His Discussions With Nation's Business Men.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt intends to continue his across-the-table discussions with business leaders Friday, receiving at the White House the executives of eight automobile manufacturing and finance companies.

Aides who announced the conference yesterday did not disclose its nature, but well informed persons expressed belief Mr. Roosevlt would propose a tightening of installment credit terms to purchasers of automobiles.

The President has expressed disapproval of "high pressure" methods of selling cars. Some Senators reported recently that he had suggested to Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the Board of General Motors Corporation, that no purchaser be permitted to go in debt on a car for more than 25 per cent of his annual income.

The National Association of Manufacturers offered last night to assist the President in business recovery efforts.

In a telegram to Mr. Roosevelt, made public by President William B. Warner, the association pledged its "sincere and best efforts to co-operate with and constructively assist such agency or agencies of Government as you may indicate as the person or persons with whom you would like us to work."

Warner told the President the association had named a committee on national policy co-ordination and co-operation.

At the White House it was announced tentative arrangements had been made for Mr. Roosevelt to confer Friday with:

Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the board of Chrysler Corporation; Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co.; William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corporation; Alvin Macauley, president of Packard Motor Co. and the Automobile Manufacturers Association; John J. Shumann, jr., president of General Motors Acceptance Corporation; Henry Ittleson, president of Commercial Investment Trust; A. D. Duncan, president of Commercial Credit Co.; Ernest Kanzler, president of Universal Credit Co.

Bliven Holds Press of U. S. Best in World

2,500 Hear Editor Deliver First Bronson Cutting Memorial Talk.

American journalism, according to one of its noted practitioners and consistent critics, is doing a better job than the press of any other nation.

Delivering the first Bronson Cutting memorial lecture of 1938 before an audience of 2,500 persons in Constitution Hall, Bruce Bliven, editor of the New Republic, said: "The American press, with all its faults, is still the best in the world."

Two-thirds of the world's population, he charged, enjoys access only to a rigidly censored press, while about two-ninths of the earth's peoples can read newspapers which, at best, are honest one day and dishonest the next.

"Only one-ninth, or 225,000,000 people, enjoy that degree of freedom we have in this country. Even an apple with some worms in it looks better to its possessor when he sees that the other fellow hasn't any apple at all."

"It is a truism, Bliven declared, that "a free press is absolutely indispensable to the functioning of democracy. It is no accident that dictators first clamp down on the press."

The importance of the newspaper to the people of a democracy and the importance of profits to the publisher, however, often lead to an "irreconcilable conflict of interests," he asserted, "but it is amazing that the American press is as good as it is despite this conflict."

Various commentators, Bliven recalled, considered the results of

Pittman Hints at New Revelation in CCC Camp Fraud.

By the United Press.

New tales of espionage, fraud and intrigue in the Department of Interior, with inferences that White House telephone wires may have been tapped, were unfolded yesterday at the Senate Public Lands Committee's hearing on qualifications of Ebert K. Burlew to be First Assistant to Secretary Harold L. Ickes.

The day's chief witness was Louis R. Glavis, former head of the department's investigation corps, who denied his investigators eavesdropped on telephone conversations of President Roosevelt but admitted incoming department calls probably were taken down in shorthand.

Glavis testified after the committee heard further revelations in connections with defalcations of Reno Stitley, former chief voucher clerk for the Civilian Conservation Corps, who mulcted the Government of $87,000.

Testimony brought out that Stitley signed checks for these "employes" of a mythical CCC camp and pocketed the proceeds; that he raised the civil service classification of two of them and increased their pay; that some of the eight non-existent foreman took sick leave, and that he operated for 3½ years before he was arrested.

Tokyo Takes New, Secret China Policy

Full Scope of Decisions by Imperial Parley Still Unrevealed.

The Sino-Japanese War.

Japan's premier was reported to have told the nation's political leaders the undeclared war against China was becoming increasingly grave.

Chinese claimed a series of successes on the war fronts. It was disclosed that at least 100 Russian-made planes and 100 Russian pilots were raiding Japanese positions.—Page 5.

Behind-the-scenes moves in Japan's conduct of war on China are discussed by Barnet Nover on Page 7.

Tokyo Changes Course.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Jan. 17.—Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye today was reported to have told Japanese political leaders frankly that the undeclared war against China was becoming increasingly grave.

Domei (Japanese News Agency) said Konoye informed leading members of both houses of parliament that failure to bring China to terms had "compelled the government to resort to another course of serious nature." What this might mean was not disclosed.

It was learned authoritatively that yesterday's governmental statement on the new imperial policy had not disclosed the full scope of the decisions.

[At Hankow, China, Dr. H. H. Kung, finance minister and president of China's executive council, refusing to confirm or deny reports peace terms had been submitted to China by Japan, declared suspension of hostilities was a necessary prerequisite to any negotiations for settlement of the war, the United Press reported.—Editor's note.]

Industry Mobilized.

The official statement said Japanese cabinet, military and naval authorities were in complete accord on pursuing the war until complete pacification of Eastern Asia was achieved. Japan withdrew recognition from the national government of China, declaring her "responsibilities for peace in East Asia now are even heavier than before."

The newspaper Yomiuri said the opinion was growing among those close to Konoye that the premier shortly would reform his cabinet to meet the situtaion created by China's protracted resistance.

The war and naval ministries invoked the munitions industry mobilization law giving the government fuller control of armament production.

Spokesmen for the army and navy said the step was necessary to make the production of munitions adequate for the military and naval requirements.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota explained to parliamentary leaders a readjustment of Japan's relations with third power was made necessary by the increased seriousness of the situation.

Hochi said "Germany and Italy informally have already notified Japan of their readiness to recognize the provisional government at Peiping. It is expected that when Japan extends formal recognition they will follow suit."

Bill Reported To Give Navy $553,266,494

Quick Passage Expected for Biggest Fund in Peace History.

Reduction Would Peril 'National Security,' Leahy Warns.

Under the warning of the highest ranking naval officer that the United States cannot safely reduce its national defense "without jeopardizing our national security," the House Appropriations Committee reported yesterday a bill calling for expenditure of $553,266,494 in the fiscal year 1939 to maintain the United States Navy.

The tremendous appropriation, biggest in peacetime and fourth biggest in the country's history, is to be rushed through this week, almost without opposition, House leaders said.

But big as it is, more money for a further expansion of the naval building and aircraft program is to be sought at this session, Speaker William B. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, said yesterday.

Special Message Awaited.

He said the President will submit a special message later this week on the national defense, probably to call for an additional estimated $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 for the Navy.

The ominous warning which actuated the committee in its conclusions was sounded by Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, who told the committee:

"The present moment is not one when the United States can safely reduce its means for national defense without jeopardizing our national security.

"The political conditions in the world, both in Europe and in the Far East, are more threatening than at any time since 1918, and are distinctly worse than a year ago.

Estimates Pruned.

"In China, a major conflict is in progress involving grave danger to American citizens. The civil war in Spain continues unabated and the possibility of a general European conflict is ever present. We must continue to maintain our existing national defense establishments at their highest efficiency, complete as soon as possible and practicable the projects now under way to improve or augment the existing establishments, and provide those features which are still lacking and which are vital to the efficiency of the national defense at sea.

"The preliminary estimate figures submitted by the various agencies of the Navy Department have

Woman Routs Thug By Use of Tear Gas

While the District's most ambitious line-up of robbery suspects netted 11 identifications in 20 cases, last night, the city's crime wave rolled on to pile up more than 50 larcenies, holdups, housebreakings and assaults in the preceding 48 hours.

Most spectacular of these was the kidnaping and robbery early last night of Fred M. Miller, 45, of 1428 Twenty-first street northwest, a Government employe. He was forced into an automobile near his home by two white men, struck over the left eye, robbed of $12 and left in Rock Creek Park.

In Montgomery County, Md. on River road just over the District Line, a pretty 23-year-old woman routed with a blast of tea gas a huge colored man who sought to snatch her pocketbook.

Tear Gas Finds Its Mark.

A stream of the noxious gas struck the would-be attacker, who outweighed his victim, Mrs. H. C. Burrus, by more than 70 pounds. The gas hit him squarely in the face. Police said the charge would incapacitate [illegible] several hours.

[illegible] at [illegible]night's record lineup, where more than 200 victims of holdups saw 40 suspects paraded before them in the shadow box, were 11 men connected with some of Washington's most daring holdups in recent weeks, police said. At least a score of gunpoint robberies were believed to have been solved and at least one gang, swooping down on the District from Baltimore and swiftly retreating, was broken up.

$2,000 Holdup Solved.

Those identified, police said, were:

Harley Maddox, colored, picked out by William E. Matthews in connection with a $2,000 robbery of a Peoples Drug Co. messenger.

Ellsworth Tippett, one of the two young "drunk bandits," who staged seven holdups here last week, identified by Fannie Litman, 337 Third street southwest, and by Louis Hillman, 318 First street southwest, also by Millard Brickerd, gas station attendant of Twenty-sixth and Benning road northeast, who was held up twice, and David Frye, Twenty-fourth street and Benning road northeast; Abraham Butts, 831 Sixth street southwest, who was the target for several shots from the bandit's gun when he attempted to resist; Morris Bassin, 53 D street southeast, and Grover Dare, 36 D street southeast.

Ellis Tippett, the other "drunk bandit," was identified by Brickerd and Frye.

Luther A. Riley, colored, was identified by Moe Hein, 600 I street southeast. Riley was identified by

Ex-Beard Aide Hangs Self in D. C. Apartment

William C. Carroll Is 2d Gambler to Take Own Life in 2 Weeks.

William C. Carroll, once a lieutenant of Sam Beard, former overlord of the Washington underworld, was found dead last night in his apartment at 2807 Connecticut avenue northwest. He had hanged himself with a leather belt.

The 38-year-old Carroll was the second Washington gambler in less than two weeks to "take the easy way out." Carroll P. "Nubby" Nuckols shot himself January 8 in his apartment, also on Connecticut avenue.

Carroll's body was found by his wife, Mrs. Elinor Mae Campbell, who has been living recently at 1539 I street northwest. His body was slumped on the bathroom floor, a leather belt, with one end tied to a doorknob, noosed about the neck. He was dressed in underwear and pajama trousers.

Doctors said that Carroll had been dead for about two days. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Carroll, twice arrested on gambling charges here, had been a resident of Washington for 18 years. He had previously lived in Buffalo, N. Y., and had once been a bookie at the Saratoga race track.

Carroll was arrested here on October 5, 1934, when police raided the Mather Building suite and confiscated a huge 60-telephone switchboard, racing and numbers slips, cards and dice. Arrested along with him were his chief, Sam

G-Men Arrest Ross Kidnaper In California

Man Admits Killing Both Chicagoan and Own Aide in Crime.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 17.—J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, tonight announced that Peter Anders had been arrested and has confessed to the kidnap-slaying of Charles S. Ross in Chicago last September.

Hoover, who arrived here from Washington last Saturday, said that Anders was arrested at Santa Anita track last Friday after arriving from New Orleans four days before.

Anders, Hoover said, not only confessed that he killed Ross, but also admitted the slaying of his associate in the kidnaping, James Atwood Gray.

"We have recovered $14,402 of the ransom money," said Hoover.

Ross, wealthy Chicagoan, was kidnaped last September 25. His abductors demanded and were paid $50,000 ransom. This was turned over to them near Rockford, Ill., on October 8.

Two days after payment of the ransom, Hoover said, Anders shot to death both Ross and Gray. Hoover said that Anders operated under various aliases, among them Elbert March, Marshall Eaton and Ray Crantz.

He said that Anders confessed further to participating in the robbery of about 20 banks throughout the country. Anders made his confession here today. Hoover said, waived removal proceedings and was sent Chicago-ward tonight.

The group, which has incorporated under the name of the Capital Garden, Inc., holds an option on a plot of 48,000 square feet of ground at Second and M streets northeast, and plans the erection of a modern structure within the next few months. The building is to be completed by late summer.

Youth Slays Circus Man With Ax, Injures Wife In Auto Trailer for Cruelty to Performing Bird

By the United Press.

Henderson, N. C., Jan. 17.—A large, white-plumed bird, the size of a half-grown turkey with a white feather pointing straight out of its head, crowed in a police cell here tonight, unmindful it was the cause of a murder and brutal attack on a woman.

The bird, alien to these parts and unknown to poultry fanciers, was a star performer of the little troupe of animals owned by Steve Good, 45, showman, of Carson, Tex., and his wife, the murdered man and injured woman, and carted from town to town in an automobile trailer van. The circus played before high school audiences.

Clarence Fairbanks, 19, who confessed the murder of Good and the attack on Mrs. Good, said the showman's abuse of the bird-performer last night brought on the quarrel which resulted in Good's death.

Fairbanks' confession said Good began striking the bird when it failed to perform its tricks at a rehearsal preparatory to a showing of the troupe in Henderson High School today.

The youth said he asked Good to stop and a fight ensued.

Fairbanks said he crushed the head of the showman with an ax after Good had broken the ax handle on him.

Good died in a hospital before dawn.

The youth's confession did not tell of the attack on the woman. Police believed she was struck when she ventured into the van.

The confession was announced late today after officers had removed the youth to an unknown jail to avoid violence.

Good's mother, Mrs. Ella Good, is postmistress at Carson, and Mrs. Good's mother, Mrs. Stella Stokes, resides in Allenton, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Phil Dodson, of Washington, D. C., brother-in-law and sister of the injured woman, came here. Dodson is an attorney in the Department of Justice, but did not take official part in investigation of the slaying.

30 Days' Delay On Pay-Hr. Bill Is Agreed Upon

House Labor Committee Members Decide on a 'Cooling Period.'

By Robert C. Albright.

Informal agreement on a 30-day "cooling period" for the Administration wages and hours legislation has been reached by leaders of the House Labor Committee in control of the measure.

No attempt will be made to agree on a new bill until expiration of the temporary breathing spell, which committee spokesmen "hoped" might have a settling effect on many provisions now sharply at issue.

No Pressure Indicated.

There were no indications of Administration pressure for immediate action. But individual efforts toward a solution were continued in the absence of Chairman Mary T. Norton, who has a heavy cold. The committee, split many ways on individual proposals, is agreed only that a bill should be reported for action this session.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, next ranking Democratic member of the committee, yesterday proposed a compromise with some of the objections of the House majority, which sent the bill back to committee in the closing days of the special session.

"I believe chances of passage would be improved if members who voted for recommittal were called in and asked to state why they did so," said Ramspeck.

"In many cases, I think it will be found that some relatively minor adjustment can be made in the bill to overcome their objections."

Changes Are Cited.

Ramspeck cited, for example, provisions of Section 8, permitting Federal interference with certain purely intrastate labor conditions, which he said cost several votes, and the House proposal for a single administrator, instead of a board.

Ramspeck said there were other less important provisions "needlessly irritating" to certain members and sections.

To date, the committee is undetermined on what course to take—whether to attempt preparation of an entirely new bill, to amend the pending measure, or to report the bill already passed by the Senate.

Differences over procedure are more acute than when the bill originally was before the committee, and Mrs. Norton is understood to have promoted the "cooling off" period to lessen the present sharp conflicts and improve prospects of an ultimate agreement.

Suggestions Awaited.

The committee chairman was represented yesterday as courting definite suggestions from the President on what he wants done, and further clarification of the views of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, which still are at odds on the measure.

Representative Lawrence J. Connery, of Massachusetts, brother of the late House author of the Black-Connery measure, suggested the possibility of writing specific wage-hour differentials into the bill. Connery is opposed to sectional differentials sought by almost the entire Southern contingent, and has introduced a bill for hard and fast wage-hour standards. But he said that if differentials are written into the law, and not left to the discretion of the administering agency, some Northern support would develop.

Another Rules Committee blockade appeared in prospect unless the pending measure is drastically modified. Foes and some friends of the bill forecast a petition to discharge the Rules Committee once a bill is reported, and an ensuing long drive for the necessary 218 signatures. One result may be that the bill once again may be held up until the House is in the final lap toward adjournment.

Politics and People

Several Democratic Primary Fights Loom as Ticklish Spots for the President and Farley.

By Franklyn Waltman

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT and Jim Farley (in his capacity as chairman of the Democratic National Committee) will have to achieve a greater skill in dodging and ducking than they have ever shown if they wish to keep out of several very bitter, nasty primary fights developing this year in the Democratic Party.

WALTMAN.

And both have been pretty good political dodgers. Mr. Roosevelt has a rule that he never interferes in purely local contests. Of course, he adheres to the rule only when it is convenient.

The rule went out of the window when the President urged the re-election of Senator George W. Norris in Nebraska. It came back when he refused to have anything to do with the New York mayoralty situation last year. At the last minute he forgot the rule when he wrote a friendly letter to Fiorello La Guardia.

Unless Mr. Roosevelt wants to get hurt this year he had better dust off that rule and give it a new coating of gilt—and even if he does that, he may get hurt. Indeed, the President and smiling Jim are destined to become virtual jumping jacks if they undertake to keep clear of some of the Democratic fratricidal strife now looming on the political horizon.

As an illustration, glimpse what is happening out in blue grass Kentucky—Kentucky, where politics is conducted with the earnestness of a mountain feud. Politics in Kentucky never has been a pastime for Casper Milquetoasts and, unless a miracle intervenes, this year's senatorial contest will be no exception.

So far there have been no public declarations, but everyone who knows a thing about Kentucky politics—including both the President and Mr. Farley—is convinced that a head-on collision is about to take place between Senate Democratic Leader ("Dear Alben") Barkley and 39-year-old Gov. Albert Benjamin ("Happy") Chandler.

Senator Barkley is up for re-election this year. Gov. Chandler is determined to go places politically—and under Kentucky's constitution he cannot succeed himself as Governor. He has nothing particular against "Dear Alben," indeed, has regarded him as a friend and a political ally. But "Happy" Chandler has his eye on a seat in the Senate and he is not the type of young man to let things stand in his way.

As a matter of fact, "Happy" Chandler would prefer to get to the Senate without molesting "Dear Alben," but there seems to be no other way. The Governor has tried to avoid the encounter. It was his solicitude for Senator Barkley's feelings which caused him last week to have his General Assembly floor leader present a resolution indorsing Senator Marvel Mills Logan, the junior Senator from Kentucky, for the Supreme Court vacancy. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

That was a rather amazing performance. Everyone here knew that Solicitor General Stanley F. Reed, also a Kentuckian, was on the President's preferred list of Supreme Court possibilities. In the face of that fact, the Kentucky General Assembly indorsed Senator Logan. It was "Happy" Chandler's way of tipping off Mr. Roosevelt as to a method of preventing a knock-down-and-drag-out-fight for his Senate floor leader. If Senator Logan were named to the Supreme Court, "Happy" Chandler, of course, could go to the Senate now or a little later. The Kentucky delegation in the House here also indorsed Senator Logan.

The President declined to take the tip. This local Kentucky political maneuvering may explain why he rushed the Stanley Reed nomination to the Senate on a Saturday morning. At all events, it is now pretty well understood Senator Barkley will have to beat Gov. Chandler this year or get beaten. It has made "Dear Alben" very unhappy.

It also has made his friends very unhappy. They decided last week the time had come to start making political hay. Suddenly it was discovered that Kentucky had never shown sufficient appreciation of the sterling merits and statesmanship of Senator Barkley. Although he had twice been the Democratic keynoter and was the party leader in the Senate, it was contended, he suffered the fate of all prophets—he was without honor in his own country.

So it was decided that under the auspices of a nonpartisan group a great testimonial dinner would be given in Senator Barkley's honor next Saturday night in Louisville. There he is to be eulogized as one of Kentucky's greatest. But Gov. Chandler found it impossible to accept an invitation to be present because of a previous engagement—just what has not been revealed. Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson, a Chandler man, asserting he could foresee some unpleasantness ahead, did not believe it would be judicious of him—the presiding officer of the State Senate—to attend and he declined. Other Chandlerites rapidly found other excuses.

But if Senator Barkley was to have a testimonial meal given in his honor, so would one be given for Gov. Chandler, the latter's friends decreed. So, under the auspices of State jobholders, "Happy" will be honored at a luncheon at noon next Saturday. Kentucky now will be able to see who comes to whose testimonial.

All this may be funny to you and me, but it is very disconcerting to Senator Barkley, the White House and Jim Farley. Gov. Chandler, having been thrust into the governorship through the efforts of these gentlemen in order to break the machine of former Gov. Ruby Laffoon, now has a formidable political machine of his own. He not only can but will give "Dear Alben" a race for his political life. He has a grin more infectious than Mr. Roosevelt's smile. Gov. Chandler always has been a Roosevelt booster. Indeed, he claims he is more of a New Dealer than Senator Barkley. He is the Kentucky Democratic National Committeeman, one of Jim Farley's own.

The Administration is not anxious to buck "Happy" Chandler. On the other hand, it cannot let its Senate leader be defeated. Senator Barkley's friends want the President and Jim Farley to throw all their influence behind the Senate leader—should the fight come. "Happy" Chandler would be satisfied if Washington keeps hands off.

• • • •

That is but one dilemma facing the Administration in the forthcoming primary fights. Another is whether its support should be thrown behind Senator William Gibbs McAdoo out in California, where a bloc of ardent New Dealers are preparing to scalp him. The President owes a debt of gratitude to Senator McAdoo (remember Chicago in 1932?) just as it does to Senator Barkley. But that is another story for subsequent recital.

Earle Charges 'Discrimination' Against State at Rail Hearing

By the Associated Press.

Gov. George H. Earle, in a sharply-worded protest to the Interstate Commerce Commission, charged yesterday "discrimination" in railroad freight rates was a large factor in the downfall of Pennsylvania's vast coal industry.

Earle testified before the I. C. C. against the railroads' request for 15 cents a ton for soft coal and 25 cents on anthracite.

"Both anthracite and bituminous are weak industries—the railroad are demanding the right to weaken them still further," the Pennsylvania executive declared. "That abounts to industrial cannibalism."

G. V. Van Norman, representing West Virginia coal interests, challenged Earle's contentions on the ground that he had not included in his statement many different factors involved in freight rates.

Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison announced final hearing on the Eastern railroad's petition for an increase in passenger fares from 2 to 2½ cents a mile would be held January 20.

The protective committee for holders of debtors refunding mortgage gold bonds of the Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville Railway Co. filed a reorganization plan with the I. C. C.

Alfred H. Meyers acted as chairman of the committee. The plan would involve assessments from stockholders to supply funds for rehabilitation of the road. Unless the stockholders are able to pay the assessments the plan envisages placing the railroad in the hands of its creditors.

RFC Loan Expected To Aid Wool Industry

By the Associated Press.

Representative Cummings (Democrat), Colorado, said yesterday he expected the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make a $15,000,000 stabilization loan to peg the price of scoured wool at about 81 cents a pound and "end the wool industry's jitters." Cummings and Senators Adams and Johnson, of Colorado, conferred with RFC representatives last week.

Kill Profit Tax, Business Man Asks Congress

New York Spokesman Calls for Broader Income Levy Base.

By the Associated Press.

The first business spokesman at public hearings on the Administration-approved tax plan advised Congress yesterday to kill the undistributed profits tax instead of modifying it and to broaden the base of income taxes.

M. L. Seidman, chairman of the tax committee of the New York Board of Trade, was the first private witness before the House Ways and Means Committee.

"The undistributed profits tax stands before the country today thoroughly convicted as an undesirable tax and as harmful to business and to confidence," he said. "It has earned its execution. Let it die."

Would Halve Exemptions.

The recommendations on which the committee is conducting hearings would lift the levy from corporations having incomes of less than $25,000 a year, but retain its principle for big corporations.

Seidman also called for abolition of the present system under which capital gains are lumped with a taxpayer's other income and subjected to income taxes.

As a means of making the people conscious of taxes and of the fact that it is their money the Federal Government spends, the New Yorker proposed a broadening of the income tax base. The people then would pay directly what they now pay in indirect taxation, he said.

He suggested specifically that personal exemptions and allowances for dependents be cut in half and that a 10 per cent surtax on incomes over $4,000 be raised.

"This is an election year," Representative Crowther (Republican), New York, reminded him. "You know that they're not going to broaden the tax base in an election year."

Dingell Rejects Idea.

Noting that the suggestion would bring married men making more than $1,250 and single men making more than $800 a year within the income tax range, Representative Dingell (Democrat), Michigan, told the witness:

"So far as I'm concerned, you're just wasting your time."

In addition to recommending that the undistributed profits tax be made inapplicable to small corporations, the tax sub-committee of the Ways and Means Committee has proposed a "smoothing out" of the capital gains levy.

Seidman countered with a proposal for returning to a former arrangement under which a flat 12½ per cent tax was imposed on capital gains. He asked that the normal corporate income tax of 8 to 15 per cent be increased by one-half of 1 per cent in each bracket to make up the revenue that would be lost by repeal of the undistributed profits levy. Referring to the latter, he asserted:

"No tax stands before this country today more hated and more discredited. No tax has so few friends and none has placed so much fear in the heart of business. By insisting upon the retention of the principle of this tax, you are fanning the flames of those fears."

Witness Fears Panic.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, of the tax sub-committee, read from hearings in 1936 of the undistributed profits levy in which Seidman said the New York Board of Trade considered the tax "sound in principle."

However, Seidman said he had opposed putting it into effect at that time.

When committeemen questioned whether the alternative of an increase of one-half of 1 per cent in the normal corporate income tax rates would produce sufficient revenue, the witness said he would favor a flat corporate income tax of 22½ per cent over any form of undistributed profits tax.

He also said he would favor the sub-committee's recommendations over present law. The great majority of them, he said, "command the highest praise and commendation."

Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Lobby of Washington, testified there would be a "panic" unless the "despicably brutal tax policies of the present administration" were altered promptly.

A. Barr Comstock, speaking for a personal service company of Cambridge, Mass., asked exemption from personal holding company surtaxes of income received by personal service firms in selling at a gain developmental stock in an enterprise given them as compensation.

Anti-Lynching Bill Supporters Can Force Night Sessions, Says Sen. Van Nuys.

"ITEM VETO" POWER for President Roosevelt, written by the House into the appropriation bill for independent offices, was dropped by the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday.

The full committee agreed with a sub-committee on striking out the amendment which would have permitted the President to eliminate, or reduce, individual items in appropriation bills by executive order.

As approved by the Senate committee, the bill carried $1,412,069,465 or $1,440,950 more than it did when it passed the House.

The Senate committee added $2,763,000 for construction of the Gilbertsville, Ky., dam of the Tennessee Valley Authority which had been stricken in the House.

Lamont Denies 'Capital Strike' Caused Slump

Declares Industry Made Strong Efforts to Avert Recession.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 17.—A Morgan banking partner, Thomas W. Lamont, today declared the current business recession was not caused by any "strike" of capital.

"Quite contrary to the views apparently held in some quarters," the financier said, "the entire business community has, according to my observation, made the most strenuous efforts to maintain the improvement that marked 1936 and early 1937."

Lamont, spoke at a luncheon meeting in connection with the University of Pennsylvania's bicentennial endowment campaign.

"In a great country like America, if enterprise is to continue to advance," he continued, "fresh capital must be made constantly available for it. Now the capital markets, the fields of private investment are practically closed. That does not mean that there is a strike of capital.

"There is just as little reason in such a phrase as there would be to say that 30,000 employes who had lost their jobs because of slack orders had gone on strike. No! Would it not be nearer the mark to say not that capital was on strike, but that it had been 'locked out' by such things as the surplus profits tax which has given warning to investors that no longer are businesses to be permitted to conserve a fair measure of their earnings for bad times; 'locked out' by the continued unsettlement of the problems of the public utilities, the needs of which, for new capital to be expended in matrial and labor for improvements, are crying aloud and cannot be answered?"

Lamont said, furthermore, that he could not "but believe that a good part of the current business recession arises from the bewilderment and loss of confidence among our citizens, owing to the general attitude of distrust toward business, which in the last five years has been cultivated in this country."

The Wall Street Banker disclaimed any desire to represent American business men as "perfection," saying "like all other men in every field, they have been guilty of serious lapses."

U. S. Aid Urged For Maternity By LaGuardia

Infant Mortality Rate Cut Is Federal Problem, Parley Is Told.

Federal aid as the solution to America's high infant and maternal martality problem was urged yesterday by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, speaking at a conference here on better care for mothers and babies.

"Medical service is no longer a luxury," the New York Mayor declared in an extemperaneous talk. "If State, county and municipal authorities fail to provide it where it is need, it behooves the Federal Government to step in."

His speech was the high light of the afternoon meeting of the conference at the National Museum. It followed papers by medical authorities, who outlined improvements in the field of obstetrical care, particularly in rural areas.

Flouts "Paternalism" Cry.

"I firmly believe," the New York Mayor shouted to his audience of 400 doctors and public health officials, "that every section of the country is entitled to proper health service. This service has no value if provided for properly in some sections, but neglected in others.

"Microbes don't recognize State lines, neither are they hampered by interstate commerce regulations."

LaGuardia conceded that his viewpoint will be called 'paternalistic' and even unconstitutional by its opponents but suggested a counter-argument which brought laughter and applause from his hearers.

Calls Babies "Patriotic."

"Take the patriotic approach," he said. The nation must at all times be ready to defend itself and health is part of national defense. The Nation has an interest in every expectant mother because her child may be a boy. Even if it isn't, it at least is the potential mother of future boys."

His plea echoed a talk made earlier in the afternoon by Dr. Felix J. Underwood, executive officer of the Mississippi State Board of Health, who demanded that conferences cease and action begin.

The maternal welfare clause of the social security act should "be amended to give more money to the States for improvement of personnel and facilities," he believes. While the goal cannot be reached immediately, he asked that the sum be increased gradually until it is large enough to provide for all who need care.

Hits Hospital Profits.

Dr. Underwood also expressed the hope that hospitals some day may be run for little or no profit. "Too often efficient operation and a profit-making policy are incompatible," he explained.

Speaking on the professional resources available to mothers and their babies, Dr. M. Edward Davis, of the University of Chicago School of Medicine, decried the lack of obstetrical training for doctors.

Students preparing for general practice, he declared, in some cases receive no clinical experience in obstetrcis, which is one of the most important phases of their practice. Even the majority of specialists in the field, he said, perform less than 15 deliveries under expert supervision before receiving their degrees. The minimum should be 50 or 100, he believes.

Economists Talk.

Dr. Davis proposed establishment of teaching centers throughout the country. Students would have large numbers of patients available for clinical work, general practitioners could enroll for short courses in obstetrics and specialists could prepare themselves by three to five years of training.

The centers would be maternity hospitals as well as training schools, he pointed out, and would provide expectant mothers with safe surroundings and expert treatment.

General topic of the session was "What Is Involved in Extending Good Care to All Mothers and Babies?" Other speakers were Dr. Martha M. Eliot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, which called the conference; Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, and Dr. A. F. Hinrichs, chief economist of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor.

Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, presided at the meeting and at a forum last night.

Roosevelt Interested.

The delegates will meet at the White House today for a symposium and a talk by Miss Josephine Roche on "The Goal We Seek." The conference will close this afternoon with committee reports.

A message from President Roosevelt was read at yesterday morning's session. The President wrote: "Clearly, preserving the lives and health of mothers and their newborn babies is of first importance in safeguarding family life and the welfare of the whole people. I look forward with interest to the findings of the conference."

After a message of welcome from Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Surgeon General Thomas Parran, jr., delivered the principal address. He stressed the need for co-operation of all health facilities in a "reorientation of our public health machinery."

Senators Weigh Charge Against Labor Board

To Decide Need of Inquiry on Assertion Agency Violated Wagner Act.

A resolution charging "violation" of the Wagner labor act by the National Labor Relations Board yesterday was laid before a Senate Judiciary sub-committee to determine the need of a full Senate inquiry.

The sub-committee, headed by Senator M. M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, set hearings for Thursday on the resolution sponsored by Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, for a Senate investigation.

The resolution asks Senate investigation of truth or falsity of the following allegations:

"That it has favored one type of union organization as opposed to all other groups;" has "intimated local public officials, witnesses, employers and workers;" has ordered the cancellation of valid contracts between employers and workers in defiance of the decrees of Federal courts;" has "violated the right of freedom of speech and freedom of the press;" "that its conduct has been such as to engender disrespect for law and order, increase dissension in industrial relations, and defeat the purposes of the national labor relations act."

Burke will charge the board has not confined itself to "quasi-judicial" functions, but has assumed the role of "prosecutor." The Nebraskan hopes to lay a basis for amendment of the Wagner labor relation act.

The Senate Appropriations committee yesterday refused to raise the Labor Board's appropriation over this year's level, cutting the board's proposed outlay by $385,000.

Freezing Weather In D. C. Predicted, Snow in Virginia

Below-freezing weather with clear skies was the official weather forecast for today after the mercury failed to drop under the freezing mark yesterday.

Minimum temperature predicted for today is about 28 degrees as compared with yesterday's high of 39 recorded at 3:15 p. m., and low of 35 registered at 8 a. m.

Snow flurries were forecast for the northwest portion of Virginia, with the remainder of the State enjoying fair but colder weather.

Ill Woman Doctor Kills Girl, Poisons Self to Evade Pain

Miami, Jan. 17 (AP).—Dr. Frances Tuttle, prominent osteopath, was found in a critical condition today with her 9-year-old daughter, Barbara, dead beside her on a daybed in her office. The little girl, fully dressed, clutched a rag doll in her arms. Dr. Tuttle wore only a nightgown.

Stuart K. Smith, investigator for the State attorney, said the mother apparently had administered anesthetic and poison to her daughter and herself and that she would be detained if she recovered.

Several notes written on prescription blanks were found, one addressed to Walter S. Solinger, her attorney in New York, which said, "we want to be cremated and our urns placed with Lamar's." The reference was to her husband who died seven years ago.

"Nobody is to blame," said another note. "There need not be an inquest. I am so tired. I am too tired and sick to hold on. Barbara is sick, too. I think it best to leave."

"To all my friends a farewell," read a third. "I tried to be kind and smiling. My own pain was at times greater than that of any of my patients and if I am not well I can't be happy."

11 of Bus Driver's Attackers Freed

Copeland Talk To Open Series At Georgetown

Senator to Take Ruhland's Place, Will Speak on Child Delinquency.

Speaking as a doctor rather than as lawmaker, Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, Thursday night will launch a series of public health lectures at Georgetown University.

Taking the place of Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, who was to have delivered the first talk, Senator Copeland's subject will be "Health and Child Delinquency." Conflicting engagements compelled Dr. Ruhland to cancel his appearance.

Commendation of Georgetown University for sponsoring the forum was voiced yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray, of American University; President Thomas E. Neill, of the District Medical Society; Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Dr. Ruhland.

The eight-lecture series, scheduled for successive Thursdays at 8:30 p. m. in Gaston Hall, was arranged by a committee consisting of Dr. Joseph R. Cavanagh, chairman; Dr. Mario Mollari, Dr. A. C. Christie, Dr. Wallace M. Yater and Dr. Henry B. Gwynn.

Dr. Cavanaugh emphasized yesterday that the talks and panel discussion which will follow will be noncontroversial in character, sole purpose of the programs being public education on preventive medicine. Only exception to this policy will be an address by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, on State medicine.

Speakers, subjects and dates are as follows:

January 20—"Health and Child Delinquency," Senator Copeland.

January 27—"Your Doctor and Crime Prevention," Drane Lester, Federal Bureau of Investigation.

February 3—"Your Doctor and Maternal Welfare," by a representative of the Children's Bureau to be selected later.

February 10—"Your Doctor and State Medicine," Dr. Fishbein.

February 17—"Your Doctor and Keeping Sane," Dr. Don Thomas Verner Moore, professor of psychology, Catholic University.

February 24—"Your Doctor and the Venereal Diseases," Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr.

March 3—"Your Doctor and the Prevention of Tuberculosis," Dr. William Charles White, past president District Tuberculosis Association.

March 10—"Your Doctor Finds Work for Cardiac Patients," Dr. James Esler, professor of clinical cardiology, Georgetown University.

Senate Seat Offer By N. J. Governor Refused by Hague

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 17 (AP).—Gov.-elect A. Harry Moore publicly offered his United States Senate seat to Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City as a "birthday present" today, but the mayor turned it down. Moore, a Democrat and close ally of Democratic State Leader Hague, will be inaugurated as New Jersey's Governor tomorrow.

Hague, 62 years old today, declined the Senate seat, he said, because it would "look too much as if I were running away from a fight."

Hague's honorary membership in the American Federation of Labor was threatened today by presidents of three A. F. of L. unions. Asking William Green, A. F. of L. president, to revoke Hague's membership, they charged he conducted "an anti-labor drive . . . as dangerous to the A. F. of L. as it is to the Committee for Industrial Organization, against whom it is ostensibly directed . . ."

Navy Department Promotes Majors

The Navy Department yesterday announced the promotion of 12 Marine Corps majors to the rank of lieutenant colonel. Thirteen other officers of the rank of major have been placed on the retention list for one year, officials said.

School Board May Lose New Building Here

House Group Disposed to Use Money for Site for Health Center.

Refusal of public school officials to vacate the Jones Elementary School the first of the year to make way for the first public health center is likely to cost the Board of Education a new building, it was learned yesterday.

After concluding hearings of the school estimates, Chairman Collins indicated that the sub-committee on District appropriations was inclined to let the board keep the old Jones school and provide funds for the purchase of a new site for the health center.

The Budget Bureau recommended an appropriation of $148,500 to buy a site and build a new Jones school at First and Pierce streets northwest.

Collins said he did not know where the health center might now be located, but he said it probably will not be the Homeopathic Hospital as had been suggested several weeks ago.

Funds will be provided in the 1939 bill to develop the Woodrow Wilson High School stadium grounds, Collins said. Residents of the Chevy Chase-Tennallytown area have campaigned for the improvement for several years. Leaders in the campaign have been Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, wife of the Senator from Montana, and Mrs. Gerald P. Nye, wife of the Senator from North Dakota.

he sub-committee today will tackle the controversial unemployment relief problem while considering the estimates of the public assistance division.

Following this hearing the sub-committee will hear the requests of civic associations, beginning probably tomorrow morning.

The Budget Bureau recommended a slash of nearly $409,000 in the appropriations for unemployment relief and a cut of two-thirds of the administrative staff of the public assistance division.

G. W. U. Student Sought; Letter Hints Suicide

The mysterious disappearance of Charles E. Hoffman, 20-year-old George Washington University student, was being investigated by police last night.

The youth, a sophomore majoring in chemistry, left his home at 3720 Thirtieth street, Mount Rainier, Md., Saturday to go to the Congressional Library. He has not been seen since.

That same afternoon, Mrs. A. B. Bridges, Charles' grandmother, received a letter from the youth indicating that he intended to take his own life. Records at the library failed to show that any books had been issued to the boy.

Mrs. Bridges was overcome with grief when she received the letter which bore Saturday's postmark. She told police she raised Charles and his sister, Marune, 26, since they were infants.

Detective John Apostilides, of the Public Relations Squad, who was assigned to investigate the case, said he learned Charles had drawn $149 from the bank January 7.

Robber Shoots Sleeper in Raid On Va. Village

Victim, Wounded in Head, Seizes Gun and Fires at Fleeing Man.

A sleeping man was shot in the head as his wife looked on, and three other families were terrorized early yesterday by a bandit who staged a night raid on the isolated village of Springfield, Va., and escaped after two gun battles.

Fairfax County Police pieced together a dramatic story of how the mysterious bandit feasted on chicken and peanut butter, and later deliberately shot through a window at Joseph Trice, 36, while the latter lay asleep, his back to the assailant.

Mrs. Trice saw the dark figure of the bandit appear at their bedroom window. Before she could warn her husband, the man fired.

Trice, unaware that he had been shot and wounded, jumped out of bed, grabbed a revolver, and ran out of the house to find the bandit. Trice fired four shots at the fleeing man, and twice the gunman turned and fired back, before he disappeared in nearby woods.

Trice, with blood streaming down his face, learned from his wife that the intruder had shot him. He drove 9 miles to the Alexandria Hospital before he collapsed. Doctors found that the bullet, apparently deflected slightly by the glass, had gashed the top of Trice's scalp, coming to rest under the skin. Trice, an accountant for the District Grocery Stores, told police he thought at first the man had broken the window and struck him.

Although at least five persons saw the man during his raid, police were unable to learn whether he was white or colored. He was described as about 5 feet, 6 inches tall, and fairly stocky.

Police worked on the theory that the man was a tramp, and that following his raid he had escaped by jumping a train. The main line of the Southern Railway runs within half a mile of the victims' homes.

Apparently driven by hunger, the marauder began his raid at the home of Walter Smith. He stole a quantity of food from the kitchen without awakening Smith.

His next stop was at the home of J. J. Viar. There, while Mr. and Mrs. Viar slept upstairs, the man enjoyed a leisurely meal of chicken and biscuits, topped off with a jar of peanut butter.

He went upstairs, where Mrs. Viar awoke to see the intruder prowling about the bedroom. Without speaking she nudged her husband.

Seizes Shotgun.

Viar awoke, saw the man, and seized his shotgun. At the same moment, the intruder noticed a revolver, a 7-shot .22, lying on the dresser. He picked up the revolver and fled downstairs, pursued by Viar.

Viar chased the man outdoors and shot at him twice as the man fled up the road. With the nearest telephone nearly a mile away, Viar started to take his car and drive to notify police. He found that the man had stolen three sets of keys, including all the car keys.

While Viar sent his son to call the police, the raider staged his attack on Trice.

About the time police arrived at Trice's home, the marauder was attempting to enter the home of D. D. Mayne. He was frightened away by the barking of Mayne's bulldog. Mayne awoke in time to see the man flee into the woods nearby.

Viar inserted in today's Post the following want ad: "Two beagle hunting dogs to trade for a good watchdog. Two 6-month-old bird dogs for another."

Mayors Testify Before Unemployment Committee

Mayor LaGuardia (left) of New York told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday that his city could not have withstood the business recession without Federal aid. Mayor Harold H. Burton (center) said unemployment had risen in Cleveland from 89,100 to 175,000 in the October 15-January 6 period. One hundred and fifty-five thousand workers were laid off in Detroit in December, Mayor Richard Reading (right) said.

other holdup victims in a lineup last week.

Samuel Brady, returned to Baltimore, was identified by Hein.

John Johnson, colored, also returned to Baltimore, was picked out by Isaac LaPados, 3110 Rhode Island avenue northeast, and by Benjamin Wilson, 705 Fourth street northwest, and Nick Bobys, 501 Florida avenue northwest, and Manuel Auerbach, 1311 North Capitol street, and by Stanley Golden, 300 M street southwest.

Clarence Trusty, colored, now in Baltimore, was identified by Lapados and Abraham Kayuffman, 1501 T street northwest.

Harry M. Towson, colored, was identified by Eddie B. Smith, 609 Eleventh street southwest, and by Auerbach Leon Pappas, 43 H street northwest, and Aaron Golubotzky, 433 S street southwest.

Thomas Austin, colored, held in Baltimore and identified by his photograph by Smith, Golden and Pappas.

William T. Nelson, colored, also identified in last week's line-up, picked last night by Golden and Golubotzky.

Andrew Savage, colored, of Baltimore, picked by Millie Farber, 1000 block Seventh street northwest.

Savage and Towson were captured after a running gun battle by Detective Sergt. Robert Barrett and Precinct Detective Dewey Guest when their automobile crashed into another at the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, Md. Trusty, Austin, and Johnson were captured in Baltimore after Savage and Towson implicated them in several robberies here.

Ellsworth and Ellis Tippett were captured in a hotel at Woodbridge, Va., with a 14-year-old girl when the hotel proprietor became suspicious and notified police. It was said the girl was to have become Ellis' bride.

Miller's kidnaping in the heart of a Northwest residential section was reported to police almost as soon as it occurred. Miss Grace McLean, walking from work to her home at 2131 O street northwest, told police she heard a man scream and saw Miller being forced into the automobile in an alley adjoining that address. A half-hour later he made his way back home in a taxicab with 25 cents the bandits left him for carfare. He was treated by Dr. Harry P. Scott, 1426 Twenty-first street northwest.

Mrs. Burrus told police the colored purse-snatcher crept up behind her while she was walking to her trailer home in a sparsely inhabited section of Montgomery County. She said she heard him creeping through tall grass which bordered the road and got her tear-gas pen ready. He snatched at her arm and cried, "Gimme that pocketbook, white woman," Mrs. Burrus said.

Whirling, she discharged the tear gas directly in his face at less than two feet. The blast almost knocked him to the ground. He fled, bellowing curses and crying "My God! My God! My eyes!"

Burrus, an employe of the Loughborough Oil Co. and a crack rifle shot, had given the pen to his wife. He said it carried an exceptionally heavy charge and would have effect at least seven hours.

Samuel Gittleman, Takoma Park, Md., proprietor of a clothing store in the 1300 block Seventh street northwest, was the first robbery victim yesterday.

Gittleman told police a colored man was waiting at the store when he arrived. When he opened, the door Gittleman declared the bandit followed him in and then stuck a pistol in his back, taking $100 from the storekeeper's pocket.

Rufus Berman, colored, porter for a drugstore at Seventeenth and I streets northwest, was robbed of $100 by a man who snatched a money bag from Berman's hands.

The robbery occurred at noontime in the 1400 block K street northwest. Several pedestrians saw the daring snatch but were unable to apprehend the culprit.

Two small colored girls snatched the pocketbook of Theresa Phiefer, 230 East Capitol street, while she was walking in the first block of Third street southeast. Miss Phiefer said the girls grabbed her purse and ran into an alley, where two older women were. All ran, she said. The purse contained $14.

Louis F. Bradley, owner of a drug store at 701 Maryland avenue northeast, successfully fought off a young white man who attempted to hold up his store. Bradley said the man held his hand in his pocket as if he had a gun.

"This is a stickup," Bradley quoted his assailant.

Bradley declared that he struck the man in the face knocking him against a showcase. The bandit returned the punch and then fled empty-handed.

Yesterday afternoon Ellis and Ellsworth Tippett, young gunmen who blazed a trial of seven holdups in 35 minutes last week-end, were taken over their route. In custody of Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett, who aided in their capture, the boys were brought face to face with their victims, whom they identified and who identified them.

The places visited were a gas station at Twenty-fourth street and Benning road northeast, a filling station at Twenty-sixth street and Oklahoma avenue northeast, and stores at 53 D street southeast, 319 First street southwest, 337 Third street southwest, and 831 Sixth street southwest.

Beard, and 11 other of Beard's henchmen.

Beard and his 12 associates were finally convicted on gabmling charges and in April, 1936, they began their sentences. Beard went to Atlanta while his underlings, Carroll among them, were sent to Lorton to serve sentences of from one to three years.

Carroll, along with nine other men convicted with Beard, was paroled in May, 1937.

Carroll's suicide came shortly after hi sformer chief had been ordered returned to Atlanta after a brief sojourn at Lorton. Beard was ordered sent back to a Federal penitentiary after the Washington Criminal Justice Association had expressed fear that the former gambler might be able, from the wall-less reformatory, to regain control of gambling rackets.

For several years after the war Carroll, known then as "Billy," was clubhouse boy for the Washington ball team.

Anglo-Irish Union In Defense Scored By Visitor in D. C.

The Irish people will reject any negotiations which barter union of North and South Ireland for Anglo-Irish "defense co-operation," Mrs. Hanna Sheehy Skeffington declared here yesterday.

The noted Irish feminist and republican, who will address the Inter-American Commission of Women at a luncheon today, said "a very considerable minority" in the six northern counties, as well as 90 per cent of the population of the 26 southern counties, favor an end of the present partition of Ireland.

Ireland, however, demands absolute independence, as well as union of the northern and southern counties, she warned. Her country, according to Mrs. Skeffington, expects to enjoy relations with Britain similar to those of Belgium, Holland or the Scandinavian nations.

Irish defense authorities, like the Belgian, might hold consultations with the British war offices, but only as an independent nation. naval bases at her ports or British naval bases at hre ports or British garrisons on her soil," she asserted.

direct Federal action in administering relief funds. He said: "Let the Federal Government take over work relief for all the country. The problem is national. The responsibility is national. I'm perfectly satisfied with Federal work relief administration.

"In fact, I feel closer to the Federal Government than to my State."

Burton, on this aspect, sought throughout a closely documented statement for direct Federal administration, while Reading expressed a desire to see a bureau within the Works Progress Administration which would deal directly with municipalities, "avoiding so many layers of authority."

The key to this situation, observers believe, is that in many States the State administration is more or less hostile to the larger city administrations.

LaGuardia, in the course of his testimony, fell into a good-natured quarrel with Chairman Byrnes over the latter's insistence New York City contributed only one-half of 1 per cent of its work-relief load. LaGuardia, poising his spectacles on top of his head, snapped at Byrnes:

"The trouble is you've been looking at too many charts. You're chart-crazy, Senator. My figures show that New York City contributes far more than its share, in fact, 39 per cent, of the total load of work-relief. What's more, I'll contribute the same percentage as South Carolina contributes, if WPA will take care of the same proportion of my employables.

Other Mayors Tell Problem.

"In fact, I'll put up $40,000,000 as the city's contribution, or 22 per cent, about, if I can get the same formula for New York City as the States get."

When he left the stand, the stocky mayor jammed a wide black sombrero on his head and stalked out into the hall, exclaiming to reporters: "I've called that bluff. I'm tired of hearing that old stuff about New York's one-half of 1 per cent contribution."

Burton, of Cleveland, said that the city's jobless had risen from 93,000 September 15 to 146,000 on January 6. In Detroit, Mayor Reading said, the automobile factories and heavy industries have laid off 155,000 since the start of the recession. Mayor Rossi estimated San Francisco unemployment at slightly increased figures, declaring that the 26,700 now on relief will shortly be augmented by further jobless.

already been pruned to the minimum consistent with what the department considers the needs for reasonable national security.

"I can, therefore, state that it would, in my opinion, be jeopardizing that security to reduce our present number of vessels and aircraft organization in full commission, to delay or reduce our shipbuilding or aircraft programs, or to fail to build up our shore establishments and reserve stocks in suport of the fleet."

The total appropriation asked for the fiscal year 1939 is 926,723,286 more than the Navy's 1938 appropriation.

It includes funds necessary to start construction of 18 new warships and four auxiliary vessels; funds to reopen the torpedo manufacturing plant at Alexandria, Va., and to recommission the ammunition ship Pyro to be ready for "any possible need."

The committee pruned $11,139,967 from the recommendations of the Budget Bureau, but left the Navy estimates untouched, in the main.

The 23 ships to be built under the appropriation will include two battleships to cost $70,850,300 each; two cruisers, eight destroyers, six submarines and the four auxiliaries.

The committee's recommendations included further funds for construction of more than 70 ships already under way.

The warship building program, it is believed, may provide work for about 77,000 men in the next fiscal year, an estimate made by Navy officials on the basis of the President's 1939 budget message. The officials declared 85 per cent of the cost of warships goes for labor, and said that of the estimated total construction work of $163,000,000, about $138,500,000 will go to labor, with the average labor cost figured at $6 a day per man, or 23,091,000 paid-for working days.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat) Georgia, of the House Naval Committee, predicted yesterday the President's message on national defense will be in two parts, one foreign and one domestic.

Rear Admiral A. B. Cook, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, told the committee, its published hearings revealed, that the Bureau had increased its plane-building program, and hoped to have 2,050 planes in service by 1941. Earlier estimates had set a goal of 1,910 planes. The new plane program, as yet unapproved by the Navy Department, Cook said, was based on a recommended increase of certain Marine Corps squadrons from 12 to 18 planes each, on the need for additional training planes at the Pensacola, Fla., naval air station and on increases for other shore stations.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison warned the committee, the hearings showed, that Congress should permit letting of contracts to private manufacturers for work now restricted to Government yards and arsenals.

Edison said: "We have drifted into a situation which is highly dangerous and might prove to be a fatal defect in time of war." He asserted existing Government facilities are entirely inadequate to meet war-time needs. He requested a change in the language of the new bill to augment commercial sources of supply for the Navy.

Soon after the appropriation bill was approved by the committee, the House voted an appropriation of $15,000,000 for modernization of the aircraft carriers, Lexington and Saratoga.

Rebels Regain Strategic Area Close to Teruel

Loyalists Admit Army Forced Back as Franco Brings Up Troops.

By the United Press.

Barcelona, Spain (By Telephone to Paris), Jan. 17.—The government war office admitted tonight a violent insurgent counter-offensive, designed to recapture Teruel, had wrested several strategic positions from the loyalists on the northern outskirts of the city.

The government's communique, although asserting that the Aragonese city itself was not endangered, said Generalissimo Franco threw the full weight of his armies in the assault on Teruel from the north at 10 a. m. and by nightfall had driven the government troops back in the vicinity of Celedas.

Celedas is 8½ miles directly north of Teruel along the important Saragozza highway, and Franco has been battling to drive the loyalists from the area in order to clear the line of communications.

The enemy attack, it was announced, was accompanied by day-long artillery and aerial bombardments "as result of which the loyalists lost slightly."

The war office said five rebel planes were shot down, including two Italian Fiats which landed behind the government's lines. Two loyalist fighting planes were shot down.

The enemy counter-offensive, for which Franco was said to have moved in thousands of fresh troops from other fronts, was described here as having been renewed "after a truce enforced by heavy rebel losses."

Court Holds Veto Valid Even if It Is Filed in a Recess

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court decided yesterday a Presidential veto is not void simly because it reaches Congress when one of the legislative branches is in recess.

This denied the contention of David A. Wright, of Winona, Okla., that a veto, to be effective, must be delivered when the branch in which the vetoed bill originated is in session.

The court also held that the 1933 economy act did not deprive World War veterans and their beneficiaries of insurance automatically bestowed upon them by the Government. Justice Black delivered the unanimous opinion involving litigation brought by the guardian of Ben B. Jackson, of Jasper County, S. C.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and other carriers won a review of efforts to enjoin the Interstate Commerce Commission from enforcing orders reducing rates for transportation of coke.

Four States joined in submitting to the court a memorandum opposing Attorney General Cummings' contention a compact between two States, approved by Congress, was an act of Congress "affecting the public interest."

Sutherland Reads Last Opinion; Reed Approval Is Seen

By the Associated Press.

Conservative Justice George Sutherland completed his service on the Supreme Court yesterday and there were increasing indications Solicitor General Stanley Reed, President Roosevelt's choice to succeed him, would be seated quickly and without controversy.

Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, chairman of a Senate Judiciary sub-committee set up to consider Reed's qualifications, forecast his nomination would be confirmed by the Senate next week. Logan called a meeting of the sub-committee for Thursday.

As Solicitor General, Reed attended yesterday's court session, at which Sutherland delivered his final opinion, that in a tax dispute, which he read in a steady voice.

Friends said he intends to reside here. He may serve intermittently on the District Court of Appeals. The Judiciary Committee has approved a bill to permit retired Supreme Court justices to serve in the courts here as they now can in circuit courts elsewhere.

D. C. Orchestra Added To WJSV's Facilities

An orchestra of 18 Washington musicians has been retained by Station WJSV, it was announced yesterday by A. D. Willard, jr., manager of the station.

John Salb, Washington pianist and staff organist for WJSV, has charge of the orchestra personnel. For the first two weeks the orchestra, known as the "WJSV Columbians—Music in the Modern Manner," will be under the direction of Meyer Goldman.

'God's Revelation' Spurs Man to Fire Mormons' Temple

Salt Lake City, Jan. 17 (AP).—Asserted "revelations from God" to gray-bearded, 71-year-old George Otis were blamed today by Captain of Detectives E. A. Hedman for a fire which threatened the famous Mormon Tabernacle.

With two small spray tanks filled with gasoline, Otis and two followers tried to hold a crowd back yesterday while Paul A. Millet, a farmer, attempted to read the "message" beside the wooden tabernacle. Mormons and visitors at the tabernacle overpowered them after flaming gasoline was sprayed on a wall of the tabernacle.

"Otis says he did not intend to set fire to the tabernacle," Hedman said. "He maintains that God told him to use the fire to hold back the crowd."

Hedman said Otis told him the "revelation" was that present leaders of the Mormon Church were not fulfilling their duties.

Once Rich Woman Is Held in Murder

Detroit, Jan. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Julia M. Barker, once reported to have made $1,000,000 in real estate, faced a first degree murder warrant tonight, but worried over loss of a dollar bill.

Held since Saturday in connection with the death of Mrs. Edith Mae Cummings, her friend and partner in many transactions, Mrs. Barker met questioners with: "I just can't remember."

Meanwhile, she charged that her two cellmates, one held on a narcotic charge and the other on a bad check accusation, took one of the $2 bills she had had in her purse when she was locked up.

Japanese Rush To Halt Losses On 3 Fronts

Chinese Menace Hangchow as 100 Russian Planes Raid From Nanchang.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Jan. 18.—Japanese today rushed reinforcements to Hangchow, capital of Chekiang Province, in an effort to halt a strong Chinese counter-attack.

This development came as Chinese reported they were pushing back the invaders on the northern, central and Yangtze Valley fronts.

At the same time it was disclosed that at least 100 Russian-made planes and 100 Russian pilots were operating from Nanchang, capital of Kiangsi Province, raiding Japanese airfields and military concentrations.

Japanese Admit Losses.

Japanese army spokesmen, who previously had denied reports of fighting in the Hangchow area, admitted 7,000 Chinese troops had advanced to "within a few miles" of the city and that gunfire was audible in Hangchow, 125 miles southwest of Shanghai.

They said "heavy reinforcements" were being sent to "the new battlefield" by the Japanese.

The statement was considered confirmation of Chinese reports that the Japanese had not been able to penetrate the area beyond Hangchow, but had been hard pressed to maintain their position in the historic city. Hangchow was captured December 24.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that fighting had broken out in the Pootung Peninsula, across the Whangpoo River from Shanghai.

Japanese stated that 3,000 Chinese irregulars in that area, who failed to withdraw when Shanghai was occupied "were being mopped up." The major portion of Shanghai's food had been coming from that area in recent weeks and the supply was interrupted by the new fighting.

Chinese reported they had captured Chwansha, across the river from Shanghai.

Chinese continued to report successes in south Shantung, asserting that Tsining, 120 miles south of Tsinang, "is entirely in our hands" and that Chinese forces were moving northward with reinforcements going up the Peiping-Hankow Railway.

"A decisive battle is imminent," they said.

Landing Party Repulsed.

Hongkong dispatches quoted Chinese newspapers as saying 600 Japanese troops landed at Chungshan, 45 miles east of Hongkong, Sunday under cover of naval and aerial bombardment, but were unable to make any headway against Chinese forces.

Chinese army spokesmen at Hankow said Chinese land and air forces made a counter-attack on Wuhu, Yangtze River city, Sunday inflicting heavy damage on Japanese forces.

The Russian fliers and planes at Nanchang were operating under the direct command of their own officers, although Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Chinese Generalissimo, still was in general command of the air force.

The presence of other foreign pilots was disclosed as the result of aerial battles. An unidentified French pilot was killed and a British pilot named Whitehead was wounded.

6 Slain in Union Row.

Veracruz, Mex., Jan. 17 (AP).—Six men were killed and a score wounded today when street fights broke out in Orizaba and Jalapa between rival unions in connection with a general strike in Vera-Cruz state. All industrial and commercial activity in the state was at a standstill.

Gas Mask Spy Jailed.

Nancy, France, Jan. 17 (AP).—Jean Fassen, 28-year-old Frenchman, was sentenced today to 5 years in a military prison for attempting to steal a gas mask from the Nancy army barracks for a foreign power.

Ulster Annexation Splits Anglo-Irish Economic Parley

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—British and Irish leaders split today over the crucial issue of the union of Ireland and Northern Ireland at the first session of their economic peace conference.

Prime Minister Eamon de Valera declared his colleagues believed Irish unity was essential to the establishment of real understanding and friendship between Dublin and London.

British officials quickly answered that relations between Ireland (former Irish Free State) and Northern Ireland (Ulster) could not be modified without Ulster's consent.

A definite break over the problem was avoided today, however, while questions of trade and defense were explored in an effort to end the economic war between the two countries and revise present arrangements for defense of the Irish coast.

Bliven Holds Press of U. S. Best in World

the Presidential election of 1936 an indication of declining influence for American journalism.

"What really happened was that people voted with the news columns of their papers, against the editorial columns. Even in the heat of the campaign, the great majority of papers handled fairly the speeches of the President and his fellow Democratic orators."

Classifying various types of press censorship, Bliven advised citizens who believe American newspapers languish under any degree of Government restriction "to take a good look at the real dictatorships abroad."

Censorship by advertisers also was dismissed as "comparatively unimportant" in the United States.

Two types of restriction which do operate in America, he charged, are "the unconscious but important self-censorship by reporters and editors who dodge the troublesome issue" and the "the censorship of the audience, which won't read you unless it is pretty sure in advance you will agree with its own prejudices."

As antidotes to these forms of censorship Bliven recommended the practice of studying newspapers of widely divergent views, a highly critical attitude when reading any journal and recourse to letters-to-the-editor, which he described as "surprisingly influential."

Emphasizing that the radio and motion picture in many of their functions compete with the press as channels of public information, he stated that "radio today and television tomorrow give the public easy means of checking on the accuracy of their newspapers."

The most serious defect of the American press, Bliven concluded, is "its predominantly upper middle-class outlook. Our newspapers report the condition of the under-privileged third of the population, but, under their present ownership, can scarcely be expected to furnish effective leadership in righting that condition."

"To a large degree, however, the weakness of American journalism, like those of the school and the church, merely reflect the weaknesses of our society as a whole."

Questioned from the floor as to the ability of "the lower one-third" to secure its own press, in view of the increasing amount of capital required to operate a newspaper, Bliven replied that the labor press need not be typographically handsome, but would have the virtue of "telling the truth."

"I expect to see a whole flock of little labor dailies and weeklies springing up all over the country," he added.

Continuing the open forum, another citizen asked, "Why can't newspapers print more good news on the front page and keep crime and disaster inside?"

"In a democracy," Bliven answered, "we must try to be tryerant of the millions who demand their tabloids."

Glavis Denies White House Wires Tapped

comes under Interior Department jurisdiction, was questioned sharply by Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, on why it took the park service more than three years to discover Stitley's frauds.

He blamed the War Department, which is supposed to double-check CCC vouchers, but Pittman disputed this and hinted new revelations concerning the dummy camp are to come.

Glavis, who quit the department 18 months ago, replied with an emphatic "no" when asked by Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, whether there had been any tapping of White House wires.

"Well," said Steiwer, "I had heard that the President demanded that tapping of his lines be halted."

"I never heard any of that," Glavis replied.

Glavis, who had several hundred investigators under him, told how departmental wire-tapping started. He said that certain officials were getting valuable advance information out of the department and that, after talking it over with Ickes, he began tapping wires.

"As a result," he said, "a number of employes were cleared and 8 or 10 were dismissed." He added that he spent about $1,000,000 on his investigations but that "we saved about $70,000,000."

Fraud-Proof System Set Up.

Glavis said he was "solely responsible" to Ickes. He denied Burlew had obstructed his espionage activities.

Demaray said that since Stitley's defalcations, a system has been set up to prevent repetition of such frauds. He said his department was late in discovering Stitley's speculations because it was short-handed.

"Are you certain that this was an imaginary CCC camp?" Pittman asked.

"Yes."

"Well," Pittman concluded, "you'll find out later that you are mistaken."

World's Highest Falls

This Venezuelan waterfall is believed by its discoverer, Jimmy Angel, American aviator, to be the highest in the world—between 5,000 and 6,000 feet. The water is seen as a trickle down the center of the picture, which was taken from a plane above filmy clouds. Angel reported his discovery to a college instructor at New York.

Aide of Stalin Urges Curb on Hooligan Japan

Litvinoff Is Too Lenient, Zhdanoff Says; Asks Drastic Steps.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Jan. 17.—Andre Alexandrovitch Zhdanoff, one of Joseph Stalin's right-hand men, urged the commissariat of foreign affairs today to take "drastic measures" to end Japanese "hooliganism."

Addressing the Supreme Soviet, Russia's new red parliament, Zhdanoff said Foreign Commisar Maxim Litvinoff deserved credit for carrying out "the Soviet policy of peace," but that he was too lenient toward "the hooligan agents of Japan in her puppet Manchukuo.

"I believe it is our common opinion," he declared, "that drastic measures should be taken which would put an end once and for all to the hooliganism of the agents of Japanese imperialism."

Zhdanoff spoke as chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the Soviet of the union and a member of the new presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

Zhdanoff criticized France's toleration of anti-Soviet terrorists and suggested that Vyacheslaff Molotoff, premier of the Soviet State, "look into" it an "straighten out those defects."

He explained the recent closing of several consulates in Leningrad (those of Great Britain, Latvia, Estonia, Norway and Sweden) by saying they were "undermining the country."

The commisars of justice and water transport, N. V. Krylenko and N. I. Pakomoff, were sharply criticized, with exclusion of Krylenko from the new cabint virtually certain. Zhdanoff said Pakomoff might be removed "within a few months."

Time For A Compromise.

Senate leaders have reason to be concerned over the prolonged debate on the anti-lynching bill. Some very damaging arguments have been made by the opposition group, but every point these Senators have to offer seems now to have been repeated many times. The debate is trailing off into a filibuster that is likely to react against the opposition because it threatens to delay other vital legislation.

If unbiased reasoning were to prevail, the bill would undoubtedly be abandoned. But from the practical viewpoint it is so entwined with political considerations that the fight could not be easily dropped, even if its sponsors were so inclined. Those in favor of the bill demand an opportunity to record their votes against the vicious and indefensible practice of lynching. Opposition Senators are willing to risk adverse reaction to their filibuster if that will prevent what they properly regard as an unwarranted and dangerous Federal interference with the exercise of State powers.

In a situation of this sort the most reasonable course is to seek a compromise. Some Senators recognize the desirability of this. But neither side is willing to take the initiative. Sponsors of the bill believe they have enough votes to force it through, regardless of how unwise that procedure might be. Opponents insist that the problem is being gradually solved by the States and that no Federal legislation is necessary.

If the Senate is to be extricated from an embarrassing snarl, therefore, its leadership will doubtless have to intervene. It might be advisable, for instance, to bring forth a substitute bill providing for direct action by the Federal Bureau of Investigation when lynchers cross State lines, and for F. B. I. assistance within the States when requested by any Governor. Such a measure would not satisfy those who are willing to upset our dual system of government to attack this rapidly diminishing crime. But it would be constitutional. And it would seem to meet all the other valid objections of Southern Senators to the present bill.

Moreover, if Senate leaders pressed for such a compromise, it would doubtless be supported by the great number who would like to strike a blow at lynching without impugning State authorities who are conscientiously trying to end this hideous outrage. Certainly an effort of this sort would be preferable to the current drift, with its threat of seriously complicating the 1938 legislative session.

Building Costs.

A timely reminder that enactment of the housing bill will not automatically produce large-scale building comes from Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture. The most that can be expected of this legislation is that it will clear the way and provide the necessary financial machinery for a housing program. Final results will largely depend upon the degree to which the building industry itself utilizes the opportunity thus created.

Construction of homes at present can scarcely be called a modern industry. It is carried on by obsolete methods, with inadequate organization and production on a relatively small scale. Builders as a group have not taken advantage of the modern technique of reducing unit costs and relying on a large volume of business for their profits. The chief significance of the bill awaiting final action in Congress is that it should encourage development of building along this line.

But the direct benefits of the housing bill are limited to a reduction of financing costs. The Government seeks to make it easier for families to acquire homes and to pay for them on a reasonable basis. As Mr. Ezekiel points out, these gains may be largely nullified unless excessive building costs can be reduced. Improved financing arrangements will mean little, from the viewpoint of stimulating large-scale production, if costs remain so high that few can afford to build.

Building material prices have been moving downward during recent months, but they still have a long way to go before prospective home owners rush to sign contracts. President Roosevelt has indicated that he will call conferences with representatives of industry, labor and finance soon after the housing bill is passed, in order to secure the co-operation of these groups in reducing costs. Such conferences will be as important as the legislation itself.

Someone has compared manufacturers who discourage building by keeping prices high with a blind horse starving knee-deep in corn. Continuance of this attitude may easily wreck the housing program. But that will help nobody. If the present commendable effort to make housing a real factor in the recovery movement is to succeed, it must have the co-operation of supply manufacturers as well as labor, finance and Government.

The Nation's Health.

The $4,000,000 of WPA money spent by the Public Health Service since 1935 has produced what is described as the most comprehensive survey of national health ever conducted. Data on some 2,600,000 individuals in all sections of the country were gathered by house-to-house canvass; these were checked against family physicians' records and more than a year was given to analysis of the final figures.

A total of 6,000,000 persons were found to be incapacitated either by accident or illness throughout the country on an average winter day; of these some 42 per cent were suffering from some chronic disease. On a per capita basis this means that every man, woman and child in the country is stricken on an average of 10 days a year by serious illness.

These findings will scarcely surprise medical or social economists. Nor is it startling to learn the extent to which illness and low income appear correlated. The rate of disabling disease appears to run 60 per cent higher among relief families, for instance, than among families with incomes of $3,000 a year or more.

Washington's Central Admitting Bureau can testify to this general proportion. Illness here strikes with particular mercilessness among those least prepared to repel it. Malnutrition, inadequate housing and clothing, and delayed medical attention explain much of it, though the mental strain of economic insecurity is believed to be a considerable factor, often inducing physical breakdowns. But whatever the reasons, the prevalance of illness among the indigent perhaps answers in large measure the charges of laziness and incompetence popularly leveled at relief and charity recipients.

In the main, the Public Health Service findings will add to the growing demand for a reorientation of American medicine. The Wilbur Committee on the Costs of Medical Care sent up the first substantial demand. More recently several thousand physicians questioned by the American Foundation certified the need for better medical care of low income groups. At the last convention of the American Medical Association, the New York delegates tried unsuccessfully to promote support for a broader socialization of medical facilities. Finally, a self-appointed committee of 430 outstanding physicians recently declared for Federal intervention in behalf of the "medically indigent."

It is becoming increasingly evident that, despite the gallant service of the medical profession in public clinics and the best efforts of private welfare agencies, the poor man is not receiving adequate medical treatment. Obviously some means of supplying this urgent need must be devised.

Group health associations represent one attempt to meet the problem; Federal health subsidies are another possibility; health insurance is probably a final alternative. Each of these plans encounters certain objections in the light of experiences in other countries. But no difficulties of working out a remedy should be allowed to distract our attention from the fact that 28 per cent of American families with incomes of less than $1,000 are receiving no medical attention in disabling illnesses.

No Longer Is Eager.

The agreement between the Administration and the Philippine government, to seek changes in the economic provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie act, is not the only indication of modified ideas as to the future status of the islands. There is increasing evidence that the Filipinos may seek political amendments that would preserve a tie between Manila and Washington after the independence act becomes fully effective in 1946.

Much criticism has been directed at the independence law in the Philippines because it required a probationary period between the establishment of the Commonwealth and complete separation from the United States. But these complaints have always been based upon the assumption that the islands would be granted a considerable period to adjust their economy before being subjected to the full rates of the American tariff. The step-up of duties provided in the Tydings-McDuffie act is entirely too sharp. In recommending a longer adjustment period the Administration is not giving way to Filipino demands but merely recognizing the defects in the original law.

Instead of trying to revolutionize in four years Filipino industries that have been developed on the basis of free trade with the United States, it is now proposed to make a gradual application of duties until about 1960. That will certainly soften the blow to Philippine economy. And in the meantime it is probable that a reciprocal trade pact will be worked out on a preferential basis, similar to our agreement with Cuba.

President Roosevelt insists that the political aspects of the independence law will not be altered. But the economic concessions to be granted the Philippines may further weaken sentiment in the islands for a final and complete divorce from the United States. Already President Quezon has opened the door for consideration of "dominion status" in place of independence.

Recent events in the Far East are probably far more responsible for this attitude than anything that has happened in Washington. With China being crushed under the heel of Japanese militarists, the Filipinos may well be apprehensive over their prospect of remaining free and independent without the protection of the United States. Some efforts have been made to strengthen the islands' defenses. But they would be easy prey for Japan. Before the Commonwealth gives way to an independent government, therefore, Congress may be confronted by an appeal to let the American flag continue to wave in Manila.

The Demand For Labor Unity.

The intransigeant attitude displayed by John L. Lewis in the internal feud of organized labor is meeting with increasingly critical opposition from some who have been the stanchest supporters of the C. I. O. leader.

A week ago David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, the third largest affiliate of the C. I. O., inferentially blamed Lewis for the breakdown in the negotiations with the A. F. of L. Now, Max Zaritsky, president of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers Union, has come out with a similar criticism.

As one of the founders of the C. I. O., Zaritsky's criticism of the belligerent attitude of Mr. Lewis is free from any animosity toward the latter. Indeed Zaritsky, like Dubinsky, gives full credit to Lewis for having skillfully performed the overdue task of getting effective organization started in the mass-production industries.

But both of the dissenting lieutenants of Mr. Lewis feel, for very good reasons, that continuation of the split between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. cannot possibly do the labor movement in this country any good and can do it a vast deal of harm. They assert, moreover, that the peace overtures made by the A. F. of L. representatives at the recent abortive parley in Washington were reasonable and should have been accepted.

It is obvious, therefore, that Mr. Lewis is faced by a revolt of some of his important lieutenants in the C. I. O., men who worked with him in building up that organization and in giving it such strength and power as it possesses. In criticizing present C. I. O. tactics they are clearly expressing not only their individual views but also the views of the rank and file of labor. Among the workers there is little interest in the personal ambitions of any labor leader, but much concern over the future of the labor movement as the united whole which it is very far from being now.

A Good Administrator.

When Harry Edward Hull was named Commissioner General of Immigration by President Coolidge, in 1925, our experience with immigration restriction was still very limited. Only four years had elapsed since the bars had first been raised against the unrestricted flow of immigrants, and the experimental quota law of 1921, even as amended in 1922 and again in 1924, contained harsh and inflexible provisions.

Many individual cases of hardship were an inevitable result. But insofar as the law gave him any discretion, Commissioner Hull carried out the functions of his office in an admirably liberal spirit. He was not only an efficient but also a very humane administrator and it was largely because of his efforts that the immigration office now functions with such smoothness.

It was Mr. Hull's accomplishment to take charge of ruthless legislation and make its operation almost impervious to criticism. That he was able to do so was not the least achievement of a notable career. He illustrated the important point that the intelligence with which legislation is administered is often a more vital matter than the character of the law itself. And he also demonstrated that to good administrators a large amount of discretion can properly be allowed in law.

Why They Vote Dry.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

"With hardly an exception, the urban counties have voted wet and the rural ones dry." So remarked the Associated Press in reporting that the forty-sixth Kentucky county out of 120 had voted dry under the local option law—and this in the State leading the United States in the production of whiskey.

That is almost universally the trend in liquor elections in the United States—the country regions vote dry and the cities wet. There must be a reason for it, and there is: it is in the country and the small towns, where the people know each other, that the tragedy and hardship accompanying the use of intoxicants cannot be hidden.

In the city a shining mass of high-powered steel becomes a murderous instrument of destruction in the hands of a drunken driver and mows down a child. In the next block, around the corner, on the other side of town, good citizens read the item, shake their heads sadly and piously remark that something should be done about it. But in the country or the village a similar accident strikes home; it is the neighbor's little Sue, a friend's little Johnny or Cousin Alice's little Tommy that is picked up from the roadway.

The Ludlow Debate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "visitor in Washington" who expressed his serious concern over procedure in the House of Representatives on January 10 was evidently unaware of two very important points in reference to the Ludlow amendment. He states that "proponents of the measure endeavoring to express their views, were silenced again and again with the fall of the gavel," and that "even applause in the gallery for speakers favoring the resolution was promptly silenced by the attendants."

Being a "visitor in Washington" he probably did not know that visitors in the gallery are always silenced when they express themselves audibly, that the terms on which visitors are permitted to the galleries are that they shall remain silent and that if they do not, the galleries are ordered cleared.

The other point of misunderstanding is on the question before the House which was, not the merits of the Ludlow amendment nor its passage, but the will of the House regarding the petition brought before it to dismiss the committee to which the resolution had been referred. Did the House wish the committee discharged and the bill placed on the calendar for discussion? It voted that it did not.

Return Of A Native.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Arriving in Washington this morning was shocked to find this city so disgracefully dirty. I am an old Washington resident, but never knew my old home to be so in need of a thorough cleaning.

Why not take a few street cleaning lessons from Geneva, Paris, or even smoky old London? It is certainly very sad to see the Capital of our great country so carelessly looked after. A. M. BLAIR.

We Go For A Ride.

To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: I have read with great interest your editorial on aviation of January 14 in which you conclude that "the world is rushing too rashly into the air." I want to commend you on your bold pioneering spirit. This is just the type of irrepressible enthusiasm that has brought Tibet and Bali Bali to their present dominant position among progressive nations.

I am impelled to ask you whether you think the automobile has come to stay. I saw something to that effect in the movies the other night, but of course, I imagine the motion picture is a gadget which will shortly be abandoned as being too experimental to continue. Incidentally, should I throw away my watch and buy a portable sundial?

Please do not attempt to telephone your reply to this communication, as, undoubtedly, the telephone is an unproven experiment which will go the same way as the telegraph and pass into the limbo of forgotten things. I have heard rumors, however, that a new medium of communication known as the postal service may replace the smoke signal and that the steam railway may obsolete the pony express. Thank heaven no one has ever yet thought of radio!

If the Merganthaler and Hoe experiments turn out to be successful, you may, in time, even be able to print this letter.

The Small Investor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is difficult to understand how some members of the Senate Committee on Unemployment can be so naive in examination of witnesses before it. One member is reported to have asked a witness if there had not been a substantial recovery in business subsequent to the time the New Deal came in. Has anyone denied that? Any intelligent high school student knows that you couldn't scatter $18,000,000,000 around over a period of a few years without bringing about an artificial recovery, even if you tried.

Why did capital go on a strike? Don't ask the big fellow—he buys Governments anyway to avoid the back-breaking tax load. Go to the small investor who is the backbone of the new capital market. He will tell you that he has lost confidence because of the enormous increase in the Government debt and because the Government has saddled upon the people a tax load of $7,000,000,000 and the greatest bureaucracy the country has ever known, with no prospect for a reduction in either.

Federal Worker's Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Noticing in your paper that a few of the annual Congressional investigations are about to get under way, I thought you and they might be interested in a peculiar type of lawbreaking indulged in by the various governmental departments and bureaus. Namely, the prejudice against military leave.

Though the law expressly gives the Government employe the privilege of, and even urges him to, take military leave without loss of pay, or fear of discrimination, the undercover activities of the various departments have so browbeaten and discouraged a great many of us, who are such fools that we believe in Americanism and preparedness to maintain that Americanism, that we are actually afraid, if not of our positions, at least of our future prospects for promotion, if we dare to ask for military leave.

Of course such charges are not capable of proof. Nothing is said when a man takes military leave, but strange as it may seem, when in the course of normal events a man expects to receive a promotion he suddenly finds for some reason his efficiency has dropped below average. Or in some extreme cases a reduction in personnel will find him on the outside looking in.

These cases of injustice are not due to the department heads, but to the pacifist, Communist, or perhaps merely unthinking people in the minor executive positions.

A Recreation Commission.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The two bills, prepared for submission to the Congress by the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which propose the creation of a recreation commission of five members, seem to synthesize the mature judgment of most of the experts who have been studying this problem for several years.

The dissenting vote which emanates from the Board of Education correctly points out a vital weakness in the proposed method of selecting the members of the commission, in that no provision is made for Negro representation. Plainly, any bill which ignores 170,200 citizens, or more than 27 per cent of the total population, is undemocratic and unacceptable. Likewise, the relative records of the Board of Education and the District Government in matters dealing with Washington's 27 per cent leave no doubt as to the position of the latter group on the issue unless the bill is amended equitably.

Recreation is more than "an extension of the physical education program of the schools." It should encompass the entire population and all elements of the population. The vital issue is: "Shall recreation in the District of Columbia be co-ordinated under a single, independent recreation commission?" We say, "Yes," provided it can be accomplished objectively."

Views On Restraining Japan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The latest announcement from Tokyo sustains the national honor or "face" in humorous vein. Japan has not declared "war" against China, yet according to press dispatches will "press the war to end." Apparently what has been taking place in China under Japanese auspices have been merely "friendly gestures." Dropping tons of bombs upon non-military areas, upon remote Chinese villages killing defenseless old women, men and children, prodding refugees who were unarmed with bayonets were merely practical jokes. War, according to the new humorous declaration from the opera bouffe military regime will really be waged (though not declared) in earnest. My sense of humor does not stretch far enough for me to visualize anything more horrible than the "pacification" Japan has been attempting.

In my opinion a boycott of all Japanese products is the only practical means to curb the insane Japanese war lords. I feel sorry for the poor Japanese people who do not want war but who cannot help themselves. If they cannot generate enough resistance to stop the mad dogs of their own nation, they must suffer. By a boycott of silk our American girls and women can stop the war. ARISTOTLE.
Washington, Jan. 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is being agitated at this time the idea of boycotting Japan by refusing to wear silk stockings.

The mind goes back to the time when no one but queens could afford to wear silk stockings. In the press not so long ago it was said that a certain English queen possessed 200 pairs of silk stockings. This was copied in the papers of the United States as of much interest to women. Since then many American women as well as other nations have come to the conclusion that their wardrobe is not complete without a pair of perfect silk hosiery per day.

This is not an argument for or against the boycott, but to show that the American people are not dependent on Japan entirely for their silk supplies unless they will to sit down and pine and mourn their loss, doing nothing about it.

The silk could be grown right here in our own land, and might be turned into a new and useful industry if someone would start the enterprise.

In this regard it might be appropriate to state that in the pioneer days women wore cotton and woolen stockings, and if history records the story correctly, they were as well gowned and as attractive as any women of their day, or later days for that matter.

So it might be a good thing to revive the old-time knitting bees, and instead of so much "street yarn" being spun by the lassies of today put them to knitting real yarn for their own stockings.

SINCERE.
Washington, Jan. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder how many American women have seen the pictures of the bombing of the Panay? I have seen it and it has brought me to a realization that something should be done, viz., dispense with all silk—buy cotton or rayon—made in America.

REBEKAH SANDS.
Washington, Jan. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Japan is allowed to whip China she will be several times more powerful a nation in a very few years and will have a man power of five to our one.

Japan is an outlaw. Sooner or later we have got to fight her. Why not do it now while we are superior and save lives and money, that we may die happy, knowing that we have saved our descendants and the world. VIRGINIA AMERICAN.
Washington, Jan. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A boycott on Japan? Yes, by all means. And while we are at it, let us do a constructive work by purchasing Finnish goods. Finland is one nation who respects her "promise to pay," the only nation who is paying her war debt. I, for one, will go out of my way to purchase goods made in Finland. G. R. C.

The Red Cross And China.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the New York Times of January 15, Mr. Marburg, formerly our Minister to Belgium, says that "the United States can still save the world. The one condition is that it accept its responsibility for the peace of the world."

Why should not this country at least start at once to do what it can to save China? Its catastrophe has occurred under circumstances of injustice and wrong which make it most harrowing.

I am informed that the Red Cross sent $11,000,000 or $12,000,000 raised in this country for the far smaller and less terrible catastrophe of the Japanese earthquake. It is difficult to see how this justice loving people can do less than that today for China.

May I beg you, in conformity with your marked clarity and leadership which have helped a sorely perplexed visitor to the center of this land of liberty, to put this question and its answer before your public?

Hell Creek Beds.

We might have been adrift far out on the ocean for all there was to see across the blankness of the surrounding landscape. Only space loomed upon the horizon. The car seemed to scarcely move but the speedometer showed 70 miles an hour.

"You can't judge speed when you aren't going by anything," Teddy explained.

It was some comfort, at least, to know that Teddy was on familiar territory. It was the last day of our transcontinental "cruise" and I was beginning to regret the impulse that had prompted me to drive Teddy back to her father's ranch in northern Montana. With every mile we traveled west the countryside became more bleak, more deserted. Towns grew smaller and farther apart, farms dwindled out and were no more. And now not even a fence post, tree or telephone pole was left as a sign of civilization.

"What in the world do you do out here to kill time?" I asked. It seemed appalling that people could live in such a god-forsaken country.

"Well, we don't exactly spend our time balancing tea cups under scintillating chandeliers," Teddy said dryly. "We'll reach the ranch by 4 and tomorrow I'll take you over to Hell Creek Beds. It is a good place to kill time."

"Is the road paved?" I asked, doubtful whether the car's knee action would stand the strain.

"Paved!" Teddy laughed. "There aren't any roads at all. We'll have to take the round-up car—the one we use to round up the horses for riding."

If any misgivings were dispelled by the time we reached the ranch, they were redoubled in the morning when we went out to the car. Dungarees, Teddy had insisted, were the order of the day and no wonder! A wild mustang would have been tame compared with the Model T that was waiting. Painted red and black, sans radiator cap, windshield and top, it looked rough and ready enough for Hell Creek Beds or anywhere else.

"The door is stuck," Teddy apologized. "You'll have to throw a leg over. Yank the spark down when I get her started."

She turned the crank over and sidestepped neatly as the car took off without warning for the wide open spaces, snorting and shooting sparks up through the floor where several boards were missing.

"It hasn't had a brake for ages," Teddy said as she calmly grabbed the side and with a foot on the step vaulted into the seat as if she were mounting a horse on the run.

No doubt we were a queer sight bouncing off cross country, over cactus and tumbleweed, up and down coulees, our hats pulled well down with wide brims flopping and silk neckerchiefs streaming in the wind. The Model T ripped and roared and spouted steam from its uncapped radiator like Old Faithful itself. But nothing seemed strange at the time in that country of sensational contrasts and striking incongruities.

We were well into the buttes when Teddy stopped the car with a jerk and another apology. "Sorry!" she said in her matter-of-fact way. "Since the brakes quit working it stops only when I put it in reverse."

Far below us, desolate and weird, the saw-toothed badlands serrated the floor of the valley as far as we could see.

"It wasn't always like that," Teddy was saying. "One time all that was jungle, echoing with frightful hissings, hoarse coughs and staccato grunts. Think of the stomping of colossal feet and the clashing of horns and saw-edged teeth on spiked armor-plate as the Tyrannosarus Rex left a gory trail . . ." She stopped suddenly. "I read that in a book," she explained. "But down there is Hell Creek Beds, one of the largest fossil fields in the world."

She took two miniature pick axes from the back seat. "You wanted to know what we do to kill time," she went on. "We're going down there and knock off a few million years as easily as Congress knocks off a few million-dollar appropriations." She handed me the pick. "We're going to hunt dinosaurs."

We found our dinosaur on a ledge far down in the corrugated valley. The parched soil crumbled easily and we worked until we had the full skeleton outlined in the shale. I took a picture of it and carefully removed one of the bones to bring back as evidence, but as evidence it was disappointing.

I am back in Washington, but the dinosaur bone has crumbled into dust and the picture shows only a rock ledge. And yet, while I am spending my time week in and week out on a constant round of tea-cup balancing at countless "at homes," I still think of Hell Creek Beds where one can really kill time in a big way. The Kirkland-Watts Debate.

FRIEND though I be of Jack Kirkland and have been since he worked on the rim of the St. Louis Times and I ran the little U. P. bureau in the same plant more than 20 years ago, I have to deplore the method of his artistic dispute with Dick Watts, the Herald Tribune's play reviewer, pursuant to which he was photographed in bed.

PEGLER.

Mr. Watts saw Kirkland's stage version of John Steinbeck's "Tortilla Flat," thought it pretty bad, and said so in kinder words than I would have been likely to use for the same duty, because, having read Steinbeck's book, I left the show with a feeling that Kirkland had used some process to boil away all the original beauty and smelt the story down to a pig of pure filth. Thereafter, it appears, Kirkland encountered Watts in a popular pub, took a sock at him, and, in the ensuing debate, finished second.

MAY I SUGGEST, however, that this neither confirms nor condemns Mr. Watts' opinion that the play was bad and that it has no bearing on merit of the critic's criticism? Otherwise, our papers will be forced to hire professional prize fighters to review the drama, and in that case Mr. Hearst will have a continuing claim on the services of the ablest critics in the land by reason of his contracts for the journalistic by-products of the successive heavyweight champions. Joe Louis would be better able to uphold his opinions than Mr. Watts, for example, although Mr. Watts appears to have done all right in this case, but the quality of those opinions and the manner of their presentation obviously would leave art and journalism somewhat the poorer.

Often I have felt sorry for the playwrights and backers and the unhappy members of a profession which lives by make-believe and therefore seems unfit to cope with the realities of a harsh world when, on opening nights in New York, the critics have sat like jurors in a murder trial, then dashed away to mark their ballots "Guilty" or "Guilty with a recommendation of mercy." The playwright works hard for many months, the little woman fetches him coffee to keep him at his toil at 2 a. m., or scours the town saloons to rescue him from despair when his second act has bogged.

The children, if any, go through a living hell for weeks or months, forbidden to raise their innocent babble in or anywhere near the apartment, or perhaps are sent off to live with the mother's divorced husband or the father's divorced wife or with their grandmother, who is an old devil. The money from the last hit is all spent or paid away to the Government as income tax, and all is tense, fearful and hopeful in the author's little bower. The actors, some of whom have been out of work for months or years or involved in a succession of flops, have been rehearsing for weeks and dreaming of success, the price of a few necessities, and even, in their moments of greatest optimism, thinking of being tapped for the movies.

THEN COMES opening night and the critics, and when the returns begin to arrive in the morning papers all this worried company discovers is that the play is bad and the actors worse, if possible, and there is always a feeling that if the critics would have been barred and the public permitted to form its own judgment the verdict might have been overwhelmingly reversed. The case of "Abie's Irish Rose," which ran five years in defiance of the unanimous opinion of the reviewers, will never be forgotten by those who have felt that their livelihood was wronged by newspapermen with good, steady employment who built up their own reputations with flippant but merciless remarks better for their own vanity than for justice.

Such critics there have been, and a few such still sit in judgment, enjoying renown as town characters or celebrities and as masters of the brutal phrase which rates a short laugh but also draws blood. Mr. Watts, however, distinctly is not one of them, and, considering the result as seen on the stage, Mr. Kirkland's protest that he had worked nine months dramatizing "Tortilla Flat" seems inadmissible. If pity is to enter deliberations of the critics, then the playwrights will start hanging around with their children in tatters and the kinfolks of the people in the cast will wail and yowl in the lobbies pleading for a break and bread.

No critic with a human heart can develop a free opinion under these conditions, and it is moved that Mr. Kirkland withdraw his protest and buy Mr. Watts a drink out of the fabulous profits of a happier venture, the endless, though who would say deathless, "Tobacco Road."

The Once Over

Fido And The Bed.

A Georgia husband is suing his wife for a divorce because she lets the dog sleep in their bed. Married men everywhere will be interested in the outcome, as it is estimated that 20 per cent of the domestic differences in the United States arise over the question of where Fido should sleep.

• • • •

Many a husband who yields to no woman in his love for pupsy-wupsy still contends that a bed and a kennel should have nothing in common, and you would be surprised at the homes that are on the verge of a breakup just because The Little Woman wants Rover to have all the comforts Grand Rapids can offer.

• • • •

It is bad enough when the wife lets Snookums the Peke crawl into the quilts, but the husbands really deserving of sympathy and legal aid are the ones whose wives insist that they move over and make room for the malemutes.

• • • •

It is pretty tough to wake up in the middle of the night and find that you are crowding a Great Dane or forcing the Siberian bloodhound to sleep on its side.

• • • •

But the straw that breaks the husband's back is found when the wife buys a basket for the two schipperkes to sleep in but finally, in the warmth of her great big heart for animals, takes them into the four-poster and asks her husband to be kind to animals and sleep in the dog basket.

• • • •

A husband makes his first mistake when he yields an inch in his ultimatum that Fido must sleep on the floor or in his own basket. Compromise is fatal. If he says anything except "Positively not!" to his wife's entreaty, "But can't he sleep at the foot of the bed just this once? It's so cold," all is lost.

• • • •

A man's home may be his castle but his bed becomes his doghouse the moment he gives in on this point.

• • • •

The next thing you know Little Rover has a special pillow, an option on any blanket in the house and the right to bring a pork chop into bed.

• • • •

And when a husband wakes up to find the harrier, elkhound or coach dog trying to bury the beef bone under his pillow it is time to phone the lawyer.

• • • •

We are with the Georgia husband in the present litigation. And we hope the judge has suffered enough to be sympathetic. In awarding the decree, we recommend that he give the wife the custody of the dog and give the husband 50 per cent of any bed he may ever occupy.

Rhode Island Prepares To Copy Connecticut And Install Blood-Test Requirement In Marriage Law.

By Claude O. Witze.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Providence.

DAN CUPID is facing new difficulties in New England and learning to like it. Bills were offered in the Rhode Island Senate and House last week to require not only applicants for marriage licenses, but State residents married outside and returning here within six months, to prove themselves free from venereal disease. Gov. Robert E. Quinn proposed the blood test law in his annual message. It has the support of the Public Health Association and the State branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Connecticut set the pace two years ago and it is its law which is making all New England marriage-test conscious. Several border towns in Rhode Island, New York and Massachusetts have watched their marriage license figures climb until Gretna Green is a syninym for any village with affable dominies within a stone's throw of the Nutmeg State.

Connecticut Requires Negative Laboratory Test.

THE CONNECTICUT law became effective December 27, 1935. The measure requires couples seeking licenses to wed to visit a doctor, undergo a blood test, and obtain his certification that they both are free from social disease. The examination itself is made by a State-approved laboratory and the report sent to the doctor who took the samples. If the reports are negative the wedding bells ring out.

A positive test for one or both of the applicants does not cancel the ceremony. If the experts decide that the disease is not in a communicable stage the physician may sign the certificate and take the infected partner under treatment. If the disease is communicable love must wait until the bill of health is cleared.

Dr. Henry P. Talbot, director of the Bureau of Venereal Diseases, reports that in 1936 a total of 81 prospective families were protected against syphilis. The figures for 1937 are not available but will probably be about the same. Forty couples had to postpone marriage in 1936. Forty persons who reacted positively to the tests that year were totally ignorant of their infection.

Connecticut's record further shows that the law had an immediate effect of cutting the number of marriages in the State but that they quickly returned to normal as residents came to accept social control. The couples who still go over the border to marry are believed to be dodging the reasonable medical fee or simply expressing their Yankee displeasure over meddling in their personal affairs.

Rhode Island Proposal Follows Connecticut Law.

THE TERMS of the law proposed for Rhode Island differ but slightly from those of Connecticut. Having borne the brunt of the test-dodgers from her neighbor, the State seeks to require certification for newlyweds coming here to make a home. Infected persons would be denied a license and persons married outside the State returning within six months would also have to prove themselves free from disease.

A maximum fine of $250 or six months in jail would be the penalty for violation of this provision by any Rhode Island residents. Persons financially unable to have a medical examination by a private physician would be able to obtain a free test in the State department of public health laboratory.

All physical examinations and laboratory records pertaining to applications for marriage licenses would be absolutely confidential. Any person divulging such information would be liable to imprisonment for six months or a fine of $250.

The procedure that would be followed would require prospective brides and bridegrooms to provide city or town clerks with a certificate that the applicant had submitted to a physical examination and a standard blood test and was shown to be free from syphilis or gonorrhea in communicable stages. The tests would have to be made not more than 40 days before the issuance of the marriage license.

The bill is the second to be proposed for Rhode Island. A similar one was allowed to die in committee last year. It was written and offered in the lower chamber by a Republican physician.

New England Individualism Struggles Against Compulsion.

APART FROM the obvious social consequences the most interesting factor about blood test laws in this area is in their clash with the recognized precepts of New England individualism, moral kin of the Missouri mule. The Connecticut health commissioner, asked recently to tell what, in his opinion, was the leading motive for getting married outside the State, replied bluntly and probably accurately:

"They're antis."

Unlike the Swedish race, which is reported to have made spectacular progress with such things as blood tests, planned production, cooperative buying and other tangents of the regimented mind, New Englanders are marked by an atavism that frowns on roads laid out by society.

There are any number of excuses that can be used to help a love-sick couple rationalize themselves into dodging the blood test law if they really want to. Connecticut's experience proves that. Mary and Bill were afraid the doctor would take a full pint of their vibrant blood instead of the advertised 5 cc. Never having been exposed to social disease, to their knowledge, they were sure the test was unnecessary. They could not afford the doctor's fee with bills looming for furniture, rent, rugs and pots and pans. And so, on and on. Back of it all, if they were to admit the truth, lies the inherited traits of some rugged New England ancestor who was both a rebel and a conformist in his own New England way.

Northeastern Neighbors Expected To Follow Suit.

IF THE Rhode Island law is passed this year, and the prospects look bright for its advocates, the influence can be expected to spread to our other neighbors. Massachusetts and New York, the other States which have felt the effect of Connecticut's law, already have ordinances which require a lapse of time betwen the issuance of a marriage license and performance of the ceremony.

The right of the State to make cupid's friends approach the altar sober appears ready to expand. Next they will have to be sober and healthy as well.

Japan's Tactics

By Barnet Nover.

Gathering Clouds Over Tokyo.

TRANSLATED into ordinary terms the "immutable policy" which Japan has just announced as now governing its relations with China simply means war to the bitter end. But that policy only became immutable not because Japan but because China would have it so.

This is of vast significance. It indicates, in the first place, that Japan's original calculations regarding the nature and extent of China's resistance to aggression have gone completely awry. And, secondly, it suggests the possibility that Japan's present calculations may equally be wide of the mark.

The fact of the matter is that Japan is now holding the Chinese dragon by the tail. It cannot let go. But it also cannot indefinitely afford to hold on. No wonder, then, that there is growing concern in Tokyo over the present Far Eastern situation and an apparent determination to redouble the present Japanese efforts so as speedily to bring China to her knees.

• • • •

SO FAR AS Japan is concerned, there is absolutely no precedent for China's present policy of continuing to resist the aggressor. That is why there is bewilderment in Tokyo over what should be done, a bewilderment reflected in the summoning last week of a conference of civil and military officials of highest rank with the Emperor himself presiding. This was only the fifth time such a conference has been called in the history of modern Japan.

During the past 43 years Japan has used various devices in getting China to do her bidding. In 1894 and again at the time of Manchurian irruption in 1931, war was the instrument of policy. On both occasions Chinese resistance was pitifully inadequate and Japan's triumph, therefore, speedy and inexpensive.

Indeed, by the Treaty of Shimonoseki, which ended the Sino-Japanese conflict of 1894-95, China agreed to pay an indemnity which more than reimbursed Japan for the entire cost of that war.

• • • •

IN 1915—at the time of the notorious Twenty-One Demands—and on various occasions since, Japan resorted not to military but diplomatic pressure. Knowing that the Chinese leaders were only too well aware of the fact that Japan was strong and China weak, the Japanese felt certain that the Chinese government would give way to Tokyo's demands. And more than once China did.

Sometimes when the authorities at Peking or Nanking showed themselves obdurate and "unco-operative" Japan achieved her aims by bribing Chinese war lords and officials.

This was done on a large scale in 1918 when a certain Nishihara appeared in North China with a satchel full of money which he proceeded to dispense to all and sundry who would agree to work for Japan's interests. And sometimes, as in eastern Hopei province in the period following the conquest of Manchuria, Japan's tactics consisted of setting up a puppet regime amenable to Tokyo's wishes.

• • • •

NOW, since the beginning of the present undeclared war every one of these devices has been employed. Japan has waged war on China and on a scale never before attempted. She has sought to win over dissident elements in the Nanking government by persuading them that resistance to the island empire is foolish and in the long run futile.

She has sought to establish puppet governments at Peiping, Shanghai, Nanking and everywhere else where her armies have triumphed. But no outstanding Chinese will agree to take posts in these governments. And concurrent with these measures she has applied persistent diplomatic pressure through her own envoys and those of foreign nations, notably Germany, to get China to give up.

China has refused to give up. The loss of Hopei, Chahar, Shansi and Suiyan provinces in the north should, according to Japanese calculations, have persuaded Chiang Kai-shek and his colleagues that further resistance was useless. It has not done so.

No wonder, then, that Japan now feels it necessary to drive still further in the interior in the hope that one more victory will do what so many previous victories have failed to do—bring China to her knees.

• • • •

IT IS NOT surprising that the militarists who rule the roost at Tokyo and who more than ever hold the Japanese government in their grip argue that the campaign in China must be continued and with redoubled force. They are persuaded that the way to achieve what the undeclared war has failed to achieve is more war, whether of the undeclared or declared variety.

But not even they can ignore certain disturbing facts. One is that after six months of war China's will to resist has not been broken. The second is that the longer the war lasts, the less capable Japan becomes of continuing to wage it simply by virtue of the exhaustion of supplies and the lack of purchasing power to make possible their replacement.

The third is that the farther Japan is forced to penetrate into the interior the more dangerously extended her lines become. And as that becomes increasingly true the more secure Russia will feel against a Japanese attack and, therefore, the greater the Russian temptation to throw its weight openly on the side of China.

And, lastly, there is the very real possibility that once Japan does get bogged down in a prolonged campaign the financial, economic and diplomatic pressure which the Western powers, including the United States, may employ against Japan will be of increasing effectiveness.

It is hardly a happy situation which faces Japan. For even if she manages to achieve a final victory before she collapses under the strain of war, she may by that time be too weak to prevent outside powers, now as in 1895, from snatching the fruits of victory from her enfeebled hands. The longer the present Sino-Japanese war lasts the more certain that in this respect history will repeat itself.

Too Many Students

By F. W. Johnson.

Who Should Go to College?

Following are extracts from recent remarks of the president of Colby College:

AT THE Williamstown Conference a New England college president expressed the opinion that too many students are attending college. This statement is supported by statistics from many countries showing that the attendance at higher institutions of learning has in many countries doubled and trebled and in some has increased five or six fold. In our own country the increase has been 200 per cent.

An extensive study of the situation has been made and the conclusion has been reached that the sorry plight of the unemployed graduates of these institutions is a prime cause of the social unrest in Europe and in some other parts of the world like British India.

"This threat to social stability has caused anxiety in many countries. Germany alone has acted to curb the tendency and has employed drastic methods to remove this menace to a continuance of the Hitler regime. Since 1930 the number of students entering the higher schools in Germany has been reduced by one half.

• • • •

THE SAME TENDENCY toward increased enrollment has been apparent in the United States, though not to the same degree as in some other countries. It is plain, however, that the conditions found in many countries do not yet exist here. Unemployment of our college graduates has probably not been greater than could be explained by the effects of the depression. The graduates of last June have for the most part found their places in graduate and professional schools or in some form of occupation.

But the time will certainly come when the question of limiting the number of students who can profitably enter college will be raised. We may assume that the time devoted to education will be lengthened as the necessary hours of productive labor are diminished. There cannot well be less education, but rather there must be more. And I cannot look upon this as other than for the good of society, if only we can give to each one the kind of education that he needs.

Of one thing I am sure, that a liberal-arts training is not desirable for all. I am equally sure that for a certain number it is the type of education that can bring the most satisfaction to the individual and, through him, of benefit to society.

Tom McCarthy

A Day On The Hill.

THEY TOLD me that it had been very funny earlier in the day. They said that everybody in the galleries had been laughing. It had been going on for a long time, of course. Filibusters always do. But even though the thing was about lynching, they said the debate had been a riot earlier in the day.

McCARTHY.

Senator Dieterich, of Illinois, had accused Senator Russell, of Georgia, of waving a bloody shirt. And then Senator Russell had said that it was absolutely untrue that he had been waving a bloody shirt. And everybody had laughed.

And if that weren't enough, according to the reporters in the Senate press gallery, Senator Dieterich had made some cracks about the South hornswoggling the North into prohibition. And Senator Russell came right back with the remark that Senator Dieterich had just pulled a "strip act" on his own motives. He said that, apparently, the other guy wanted to punish the South for prohibition.

Well, according to the boys in the press gallery, it kept them all in stitches. But nobody seemed to mind that the filibuster on the anti-lynching bill kept dragging out hour after hour, just as long as they kept it funny.

But I guess I must have got in for the dry part of the discussion. The boys said that I'd missed the best part. But it looked pretty good for awhile, because Senator Reynolds from North Carolina had the floor, and he was hopping around waving his arms and running his words together like a tobacco auctioneer.

And the boys in the press gallery said that he was making a speech on Fascism in South America, so that he could make a parliamentary maneuver and get something into the record. It appeared that he wanted to get something in the record, so that after he got through they could call for a roll call. If there wasn't a quorum present, they could then adjourn for the day and the filibustering Senators would have a chance to cool their voice boxes.

And so Senator Reynolds zipped right through his speech, dancing around a bit with one hand over his head. But he didn't sound as though he was too interested.

He told everybody that "I am glad, indeed, that I had the very great honor of serving one term in the United States Senate with our Secretary of State."

And then, he told them that our Secretary of State was down at the peace conference in Brazil. And he said that Mr. Sumner Welles was there too. But I guess the boys in the press galleries must have read all about that in the papers last year so they just drifted out to take a smoke. But, since I don't get down to the Capitol very much, it was mighty fine and inspirational to see the United States Senate in action.

THEN, SENATOR REYNOLDS really worked up speed to get through his stint, so they could call for a quorum and maybe adjourn. And he highballed so fast through the last paragraph that he yelled something about foreign doctrines should be "nipped in the bug." But he caught himself, without any loss of motion, and hurled out "in the bud."

They had their roll call, but they still had a quorum, so Senator Reynolds' teammate from North Carolina had to carry on the filibuster for the afternoon. And I guess the Senators knew what was coming because by the time he got wound up, there weren't enough of them around to make it worthwhile to set up a soft drink concession. Not, anyway, if you expected to do business.

For awhile, nobody but a few of the Senators in and around where Senator Bailey was sitting, could hear him. And they didn't seem to pay much attention, except for Senator Cotton Ed Smith, who sometimes nodded affirmation and shifted his quid. But from the galleries it was sort of like watching a silent movie, without seeing the captions. And so the galleries began to thin out a bit.

After awhile though, an occasional word drifted up, and somebody whispered that "Bailey's a slow starter, but wait till he gets hot." And the fellow was right, because I could catch on that the Senator was saying that he was going to talk about something, if he had the time.

Then he said he hoped he was going to have the strength to do something else. And, not content with that warning, he said that he was going to talk about something else again if he had the time. Then he capped the whole thing by mentioning that he might "have some other things to say," too.

• • • •

WELL, YOU CAN SEE the effect of that kind of talk on the galleries, filibuster or no. They were leaving by the bus load. But Senator Tom Connally from Texas, who is leading the filibuster, didn't look worried. He just sat there, dry-washing his hands and playing with some shiny thing that hung on a black ribbon from around his neck.

I guess Mr. Connally knew what was coming and he just settled back like a cat waiting for somebody to shove a dish of sardines around the door.

And when Senator Bailey got hot and began yelling about catering to the Negro vote, Senator Tom looked as though he'd known this was coming all the time.

And when Senator Bailey's voice boomed out and his hand went forward in the air like a guy punching the small bag, I could see that he'd hit his stride.

And I'd liked to have wept when he got to the part about all Negroes in his home town voting against him. Because you could tell from his own words what a nice fellow he was.

For his voice quavered softly through the Senate Chamber like a muted note from an old violin, when he said, in speaking of the Negro race, "They cast 2,500 votes against me in my own town in that election." And then, very tearful-like, he said, "But I have never had it in my heart to blame them."

What Effect Did the Ethiopian War Have on The Palestine Crisis?

Italian propaganda in Palestine has grown to large proportions lately. In his series of articles on the Palestine crisis, C. Poznanski, Editor, Journal des Nations, Geneva, tells how the Ethiopian war gave Italian propaganda its momentum in Palestine . . . he writes about the Arab Strike in 1936 and tells who financed it. This series is of special interest because it gives the picture of present Palestine and the effect of world events on Palestine. These articles start

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

After Providing Dinner and Show, Average Man Assumes Right to Girl's Caresses, Reader Says.

Calling himself "average boy dating average girl," a young man wrote this column a week ago to complain of the "promiscuity prevailing among today's girls." He asked for corroborative testimony from other young men, saying, "If such letters aren't forthcoming, it's because men lack the intestinal fortitude to tell the truth." So far, no such letters have been received. Instead today's girls are defended and the complainant accused. Further comment on the subject is printed today.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should like to answer "Another Man Reader," who "boldly invaded" your column last Tuesday to lament the disappearance from the modern social scene of "the girl of yesterday—the girl whom men respect, the girl who is capable of a true, fine and lasting love which she reserves for her future husband alone." I have been married, and to a man who had been taught to believe that women should be kept on a pedestal and shielded from all the hazards of this modern world of changing standards and economic strife, which makes it impossible for either sex to lead the kind of life, or build the kind of homes, that our grandparents knew.

* * * *

I have been up against a stone wall, time and again, in my social relationships with men. Girls, as I understand them, want companionship from their men friends; good, clean fun; the kind of attention that might include going dancing, to a show or to dinner. They are looking for that mutual spark of attraction which, if and when discovered, might lead to love-making, yes—in due course of time; but love-making that is mutually sincere and meaningful; that has as its platform mutual good will, respect and understanding; and the hope that the attraction is leading to something definitely constructive and enduring for both. In other words, marriage, I suppose.

* * * *

Girls, as I know them, are willing to meet a man half way in friendship and in courtship. They are not out for cheap good times with every personable man they meet any more than they are out to net him by fair means or foul as a husband. They are realistically interested in getting to know a man for what he actually is like and is worth as a human being. They don't disdain the man on the small salary any more than they clutch desperately at the fellow with the real or reputed bank roll. With the former, they are happy to walk and talk, to discuss with him their respective careers and problems. With the latter, they are perfectly willing to let him foot the bill and listen to him tell how the world should be run. But does either man understand the sheer friendliness of their camaraderie? Not often, to say the least. The average man's attitude is something like this: Well, I've taken you to dinner and a show, so now I've bought the right to make love to you. Try to inkle, in various tactful ways, that no such arrangement exists or was implied and his manly pride is hurt. He pointedly avoids you thereafter.

* * * *

The result, usually, is injured feelings on both sides. After a number of such dismaying experiences, it's a pretty dull girl who doesn't decide that if petting is the price she must pay for masculine companionship, then she might as well grin and bear it. Of course, if she's an exceptionally attractive girl, she can afford to stick by her guns. But needless to say, there aren't so very many girls who have a stag line to pick and choose from. We are concerned with the average girl.

* * * *

My advice to men of the "Another Man Reader" type is to stop cavilling about the manners and morals of their girl friends and devote more attention to improving their own. I'll wager the immediate all-around improvement would be simply staggering. Give a girl a right to be herself and the right to accept her men friends for what they really are; take care that you—the man—are as honorable and upright and sincere and straightforward in your dealings with the girl as you are hoping she will be with you, and you will find 99 out of every 100 girls toeing the mark of your highest expectancy. Frankly yours, A. L.

Let Him Study Himself.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Another Man Reader" is an incredibly naive young man. Apparently it hasn't occurred to him, and to other men of his same stripe—who are wondering where and how they are ever to find the ideal wife—that he has more chance of winning and finding her, merely by looking, than he has of getting a million dollars from Secretary Morgenthau merely by asking for it. "Another Man Reader" calls himself "average" boy dating average "girl," yet he presumes to submit himself as an acceptable candidate for perfection in wifely virtues. While he probably intended to say he was no worse than average, that in itself suggests he is also no better than average.

* * * *

Why doesn't he ask himself: What are my prospects of success, measured and paid for in terms of social service, during the next 20 years? What have I to offer to society, to a wife and to posterity? Am I really educated? Have I the solid foundations of good character and sound training? Have I the pleasing personality, the mental and cultural attainments that would recommend me to the attention of really intelligent persons?

* * * *

No farsighted young woman who possessed the intelligence which necessarily underlies the virtues he admires and seeks in the fair sex would waste any time on him, so long as he indicates by his conduct that what interests him most on a date is her reactions to the possibility or actuality of light love-making!

YOUNG WIFE.

Two Men's Views.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are writing in response to the letter from "Another Man Reader," published in your column of January 11. We are two young men with a four-year college education. We cannot understand how a young man who is supposed (according to his own testimony) to be associated with nice people, could possibly get such a disagreeable impression of the girls of today.

* * * *

Do you mean to tell us, "A. M. R.," that you are judging all girls by the necessarily limited number you have "dated?" If so, we think you are either very narrow minded or extremely imaginative. Our associations, strange to relate, have been very pleasant, and we know many lovely girls. However, on the other hand, we have never seen the slightest harm in a girl's returning a young man's kiss. It's too bad the wheel of time can's be turned backward for you so that you could associate with the shy and swooning damsels of the gay nineties.

* * * *

Try to clear some of the musty cobwebs out of your brain, "A. M. R.," and then perhaps you can meet up with an enjoy some of the "sweet, smart, understanding girls" of the 1938 variety, nearly all of whom, so far as we have found, are "capable of a fine, true and lasting love, which they reserve for their future husbands alone." Sorry, "A. M. R.," but you asked for it—a statement from "other masculine readers!"

Many Discard Heavier Coats For New Tweed

Interlined Types Offered in D. C. in Varied Hues and Styles.

This is one of a series on how to enliven the midseason wardrobe.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

BECAUSE of the mild Washington weather many persons are discarding fur coats and donning the new interlined tweeds, worn over woolen dresses. To cope with this situation the local stores and shops have an entire new array of smart woolens in dark and bright color tones; sheer wools, jersey, knits. These are available in both one and two-piece versions, trimmed with distinctive buckles, clips, belts and buttons. They are ideal foils for the midseason hats, gloves, and costume jewelry, and a practical purchase, since they can be smartly worn without a coat next spring.

For those who continue to wear fur coats or heavy winter coats, there are some good-looking dresses in another classification, equally alluring. Silk crepes in novelty weaves and patterns and rayon in the effective sacking family (hopsacking, sugar sacking, salt sacking), are appearing in luscious new tones of raspberry, dusty pink, blue-green, medium blue, beige, gold. Like the latest woolens, the silks and rayons are made in simple styles, of the spectator sports type, to complement accessories of the same character.

Jacketed costumes in both solid dark colors and gay prints are also much in evidence; as practical for midseason as they will be for spring, enhanced by fur scarfs. This game of midwinter wardrobe rejuvenation can be fun and progtable and with the intriguing new things in the stores and shops there should be no difficulty in finding smart clothes and accessories.

Quit Calling Job A Career, Women Warned by Expert

Just because you have a job don't make the mistake of considering yourself a career woman, advises Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, managing director of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations.

At a career conference in Philadelphia, Mrs. Woodhouse told Beaver College students that "a job is a job these days and dressing it up by calling it a career is silly, for career women are women of the past."

"More and more married women are being accepted in the professions and in industry," she continued. "Women have always contributed to the home. Years ago they wove cloth and dipped candles by hand. Today these things are done better by machinery, so women go out and earn money to buy clothes and pay the electric light bill."

Instead of competing with men, women are going into service jobs rather than productive occupations, according to Mrs. Woodhouse. In support of this theory, she cited the jobs of social service workers, public health employes, teachers, nurses and recreation directors that are mostly filled by women. In this field, she maintains, women are not competing with men but doing those things that they do best.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Jan. 17.

CUPID struck like a puff-adder here the other day, and his fatal fangs pierced the racing heart of Betty Wyman, perhaps the first of the photographic models and fashion show mannequins to win Nation-wide fame for her face and figure.

ALICE HUGHES.

Yes, Betty the Great is married to Jack McGowan, Broadway and Hollywood writer. Need I add that she and Jawn are "deliriously happy"? I certainly hope not. They romantically darted off to Elkton, Md., the famous Gretna Green of the East Coast, and said the fateful words. And now the beaming bride says she is through with modeling for all time—that famous face will peer sweetly no more from the pages of the slick-paper magazines each month!

"How will this affect the soul, or "ego," of such a public figure.

"I don't think I'll miss it," she says. "I did more than my share of posing for six years. Of course, it's very flattering work, wearing the newest and most expensive furs and gowns. But it doesn't give you any lasting happiness!"

Well, by this time you should know, Betty my dear.

* * * *

It was the colored cigarette ads that made the face of La Wyman as well known to us as those of our own children. She was the first beautiful girl to "reach for a whoo-zis instead of a so-and-so." Soon she was under exclusive contract to a great American furrier, and wore his chinchillas alone. Since Betty's start in 1931, the profession she adorned has grown and bloomed, and scores of other beauties carry on their glamorous business as she steps out to fry the morning eggs for Comrade McGowan. But Betty, in all her glory, started the rage!

Interesting to see if she does stay retired. Don't weaken, honey!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The long-awaited appearance on our stage of Mr. Fredric March, of Hollywood, and his pretty wife, Miss Florence Eldridge, passed off with alarming mildness—like a new-style winter! We had expected dancing in the streets, and red-fire on the courthouse lawn, but little happened. The critics were pretty terse with their costume play, "Yr. Obedient Husband," and barely tolerant of the acting. Unless Freddy's fans rally around in enormous numbers, it looks as though another floppo will be added to the long list already sadly compiled on Broadway this season by pets from the screen! Alas, say I, or do I? . . .

* * * *

I hear that little Mitzi Green, musical comedy star now after baby years in the movies, got a costly sable coat for Christmas, and that it was the lavish gift of a girl named Mitzi Green. Nice co-operation, girls!

As predicted, the Big Apple has already shrunk to a crab here. The mood of a moment, that's all—mad and deliriously brief!

* * * *

I learn that a new novel from London strikes American booksellers today—written by Mary Borden, it is called "Strange Week-End"—odd, it sounds as though any one of us could have penned it, with that title! . . . Aren't they pretty much all? . . .

* * * *

You'd think modern college girls would go stark daffy the way people keep asking them questions. The other day the 100 seniors at our Hunter College were asked to describe their "ideal man"—novel, eh? Most of the young ladies carried on about good looks, sense of humor and even wealth (Ugh!), but one unnamed wonder-girl actually demanded that this mythical critter "must appreciate a woman's brain." Wonder what ever put that droll notion in her pretty head, if it is pretty? . . .

* * * *

Gertrude Lawrence tells me she presented the members of her "Susan and God" company with a table tennis set—but may take it away again because it's getting hard to lure them to the stage for their cues!

* * * *

Nothing has driven local womanhood quite so frantic as this hair-doers' demand for brushed-up locks! There's fighting on Fifth avenue? It's awful. Some of the town's belles say all right, we will, and we'll get hats to match. The other camp says pooh on it, we'll wear our hair long and flattering if we choose. It's bitter, and the National Guard may be called out any day now!

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Household Hazards Many.

The Red Cross lists a number of "don'ts" for householders:

Don't leave toys on the staircase.

Don't turn on the light from the bathtub.

Don't leave your medicine chest open.

Don't use a rocking chair for a ladder.

There are several others that apply more to summer than to winter.

These emphasize that "safe at home" is just a phrase. The home is almost as dangerous as the automobile.

I list them by request, but I am not sanguine that the warnings do much good. Even when people have had a warning. There are plenty of people who will somke in bed tonight immediately after reading this article. And there are even people on record who have set fire to the bed, and then two weeks later set fire to the sofa downstairs, and a month later set fire to the pillows on a chair, and then set fire to the bed again. Somebody once remarked "The bed is not green even if you are."

I can tell one story on myself anent not leaving the toys on the steps. There is a codicil to that which is "Always turn on the light when you intend to go down the cellar steps." Well, I open the presses to add that last night, right after I wrote that good advice, I took a load of books in my arms, piled so high that I couldn't see over them, started down the cellar steps in the dark, stepped on a piece of fire wood, and nearly became your "late correspondent."

So if you really intend to get any good out of this health advice, do as I say and not as I do.

About the medicine closet being open. The idea is that young children climb up on a stool and take out the contents of the medicine chest, and swallow some poisonous mixture. The real way to be safe on this is to say to yourself, "Don't have any poisonous mixtures or medicines in your medicine closet." What do you want them for? Especially don't have any cathartic pills containing strychnine—the aloin, strychnine, belladonna pills—because more children die of strychnine poisoning from swallowing such pills than all other forms of poison put together.

The "Don't turn on the light while standing in the bathtub" question we will take up tomorrow.

Actress Gives Tip on Perfect Street Make-up

WHEN Pere Westmore, Hollywood expert, makes up a star for the motion picture cameras he doesn't let a single detail escape his eye. The girl is as nearly flawless as cosmetics can make her before she leaves his workroom.

Beverly Roberts, movie actress, believes these same rules can be applied to one's street make-up. Although the height of make-up artistry for everyday life is to achieve a natural appearance, Beverly maintains it can be accomplished even though one makes up lips, brows, lashes, face and nails.

"Everyone should use a good make-up foundation," says Beverly, "just as we players do before applying powder. If it protects the skin under the strong arc lights it will also protect it from the sun. It also hides lesser blemishes and makes powder and rouge adhere hours longer.

"Although it takes hours and hours of practice, nevertheless lip rouge should always be applied with a brush. Not only do we obtain a much smoother line this way, but it is easier to improve the shape of the mouth by a slight change of outline.

"Many actresses also draw short lines at the outside corners of their eyes with a red pencil to increase the length of the eye. Although this would look too artificial in the daytime, it's an idea for after dark."

Hats Match Frocks.

Paris, U.P.—Smart little sports hats follow the fabric of daytime suits with trim of the same material as the sweater or blouse, and combinations of belt, bag and shoes may be worked out in harmony.

Perfume for Evening.

To complement the sheerness of the lovely materials used in the evening gowns for resort and cruise wear, a new perfume called "Organdy" has made its debut. It is said to be typical of the freshness and charm of these new formals, and, at the same time, gay and spirited.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Here's a Way to Arise Easily and Still Get Exercise.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THERE ARE two kinds of people before breakfast. The ones who spring blithely out of bed and sing in the shower . . . And the rest of us who uncoil from sleep with the greatest reluctance, ease out of bed one foot at a time, and hope nobody expects any bright conversation before we've had our coffee.

Since the way we awaken often sets the pace for the day, it pays to form habits that make the going easier. Jumping out of bed to exercise on a cold morning is out of the question, but there is a pleasant way to start the day right. Before you get up, try a two-way stretch, pulling up with the arms and down with the legs until you feel slim in the middle.

A few thorough stretches will banish that lazy, listless feeling, so roll over on your side and stretch and pull. Let yourself go limp and stretch again.

Here is the nicest exercise for keeping your throat young! You do it while you still are in bed. Lie on the back with the head hanging over the edge of the bed. Now, pull your head up by the throat muscles until it is level with the bed, lower slowly and repeat the exercise. Begin with three times and gradually increase to six.

There you are, well started on your morning exercise. Fall out of bed and give your circulation the benefit of a real jog with just half your daily dozen. Turn on the radio and put some rhythm into your exercise — loosen up and limber, it will keep you young! You can make your waistline slim and supple with a few twists and turns every morning. Stretch the arms high overhead and revolve at the waist.

To get the most exhilaration out of exercise, be sure that there is fresh, moving air in the room. The room temperature may be as warm as you desire, as long as there is a circulation of fresh air.

The less clothing you wear the better. So that you can move easily and rhythically, wear a gym suit, swim suit or pajamas.

I know you are going to kick—

A Few Stretches Will Banish That Lazy, Listless Feeling.

just at first—about this morning exercise, so let's turn it into a hip-slimming measure. Stretch the arms out in front of the body, shoulder level and kick the left hand with the right toe, and the right hand with the left toe. Kick to music and repeat 15 to 20 times. When your waistline is supple enough to permit, swing the arms straight out from the sides, shoulder level, and kick the left hand with the right toes, the right hand with the left toes. Twist only at the waist and do no lower the arms. You want to kick, don't you?

Just a few stretching exercises each morning will wake you up to the possibilities of what exercise means to your health and figure.

Melchior Wins Plaudits At Townsend Musicale

Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboschutz at Piano Present Numbers; Mrs. Roosevelt in Audience for First Time This Season.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

One of the longest yet most entertaining of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicales this season took place yesterday at the Mayflower when Lauritz Melchior, Metropolitan Opera tenor, and the piano team of Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboschutz presented 20 numbers and three encores.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Whereas, prolonged applause and an occasional "Bravo!" generally punctuate these concerts, actual sequels of delight rippled through the audience following each of Mr. Melchior's solos. And when the piano duo responded to the ovation after their presentation of Stravinsky's spirited "Russian Dance" by playing as an encore "The Flight of the "Bumble Bee," there were muffled cries of "Wonderful!" "Superb!" and "Remarkable!" all over the ballroom.

For the first time this season Mrs. Roosevelt was in the audience. She arrived a few minutes late, having been delayed by her pressconference arranged half an hour earlier so that she could get to the concert. Her guests at the latter were Senora de Espil, Senora de Castillo-Najera and Frau Dieckhoff.

Since yesterday's event marked the 101st musical morning sponsored by Mrs. Townsend, a surprise of the program was the presentation to her of a huge bouquet of white illies. Mr. Melchior had just completed the final number in his second group when a page ran down the aisle bearing the bouquet. When the artist took it, he glanced at the card, then asked Mrs. Townsend to come to the stage. Giving it to her, he mentioned that it had come from Hans Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra. A few words from Mrs. Townsend and a bit of by-play in which she plucked one lily from the bouquet, gave it to the tenor and urged him to promise to return next year brought loud applause from the audience.

Rumanian Minister Among Luncheon Guests

Following the concert, Mrs. Townsend entertained a large company at luncheon in the Mayflower dining room. The retiring Rumanian Minister, Charles A. Davila, was ranking guest and the artists of the morning were guests of honor.

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt were in the party; also, the Charge d'Affaires of the French Embassy, Jules Henry; the Charge d'Affaires of Denmark, Wilhelm Eickhoff; V. A. L. Mallet, Keith Officer and Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Sims, of the British Embassy; Lieut. Col. Emmanuel Lombard and Count and Countess de Gramont of the French Embassy, and Nicholas Lely, counselor of the Greek Legation.

Others present were Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, Mrs. Charles M. Lea, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Henry Martin Alexander, of New York; Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Mrs. Charles S. Alden, Miss Katherine Judge, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Lauritz Melchoir, Countess Gizycka, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Miss Elizabeth Vandenberg, William K. Ryan, Richard Baldwin, Chalmers Roberts, of London; Lothrop Stoddard and Ignace Strasfogel, accompanist for Mr. Melchior.

Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith was accompanied by her house guest, Mrs. Earle E. Butler, of Des Moine, Iowa, and Edna Meredith. Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovak Minister, was glimpsed in the crowd; also Frau Thomsen, Miss Carolyn Chantry and Mrs. Benton McMillin. Among the guests were Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend and the two pianists who appeared on Mrs. Townsend's program yesterday morning . . . Mme. This will be the first time in many months that the handsome legation on the corner of Fifteenth and Euclid streets will have opened its doors to Washington society. Mme. van Haersma de With and her attractive blonde daughter, Mlle. Nora de With, only recently returned from a stay of several months in Europe. About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

FORMER SENATOR and Mrs. Harry Payne Bingham, who have been living rather quietly since their return last all from a London honeymoon, will entertain at dinner on Friday evening in honor of the Ambassador to Turkey and Mrs. John T. MacMurray.

Some people, confused about the MacMurray official status, are under the impression that he is now a "former Ambassador" since he is living in Washington this winter. As a matter of fact, he is here only for two or three months in connection with work for the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs. The Philippines is only one of many foreign countries which Mr. MacMurray has visited in his service as a career man with the State Department. Drawing Bangkok as his first assignment, he has since been assigned to such exotic places as Peking and Leningrad. At one time he was chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department and later Minister to Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania. He and Mrs. MacMurray are living at the Anchorage during their stay in Washington.

Before her divorce last year, Mrs. Bingham was Mrs. John Philip Hill. The former Mrs. Bingham is now Mrs. Henry Gregor, wife of the Washington pianist.

The Woodwards reside in the beautiful house on N street, likewise in Georgetown, which belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther . . . People are still talking about the week-end festivities, including the cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, the dinner at which Clarence Hewes was host; Mrs. Matthew Hanna's cocktail party and the luncheon given by the First Secretary of the German Embassy and Mrs. Herbert Scholz. Mr. Scholz has since sailed for a brief stay in Berlin.

AN INTERESTING visitor is in Washington for a brief stay. She is Miss Anne Carrere, daughter of John C. Carrere, distinguished architect, and is the first cousin of attractive Mrs. Warren Barbour, wife of the former Senator from New Jersey. Miss Carrere is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Turrentine at 4439 Cathedral avenue. She formerly resided in Washington in one of the most beautiful of Georgetown's old houses, and now lives at her country place, quaintly called Anne's Acres, near Havre de Grace, Md.

Mrs. Carrere's father designed many notable buildings, among them the New York Public Library. He also did the town house of Mrs. Sumner Welles on Massachusetts avenue. Miss Carrere herself is a landscape architect of note.

ANOTHER LANDMARK of Washington has been sold. Both the late Chief Justice and Mrs. White were Catholics. Until her death several years ago, Mrs. White, who was originally from Louisiana, was among the leaders of Capital society.

Mrs. Ralph Worthington has arrived at that Southern resort and has opened her house in Coconut Grove. She will be joined later by her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Adam K. Luke, jr., of New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor have returned to Wildacres, their Bethesda estate, after a sojourn in Miami. Among recent arrivals there are Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Hooker, who are at the Alcazar, and Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Marshall, who are stopping at the Gralyn.

Nina O'Hare Becomes Bride

Miss Nina Marie O'Hare, daughter of John Vincent O'Hare, was married at 9 o'clock yesterday morning to Francis Ira Wheatley, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Winship Wheatley, of Hyattsville, Md. The ceremony took place at St. Martin's Church, with a reception following at the Washington Club.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white slipper satin with long tapering sleeves and a train. A circular veil covered her face and she carried a bouquet of gardenias.

Miss Irene McCarthy was maid of honor, wearing a cornflower blue frock with matching accessories. The bridesmaids were the Misses Margaret Mary Wheatley and Rosemary Wheatley, sisters of the bridegroom, and Anne Foster and Mary Moreland. Two were gowned in aqua net dresses and the others had chosen similar frocks in an ashes of roses shade.

Matthew Wheatley was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Winship and Albert Wheatley, two other brothers, and Benjamin Pollard and Carl Lee.

After a wedding trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Wheatley will reside in Washington.

Dorothy Sollers Chooses Feb. 23 As Wedding Day

Miss Dorothy Sollers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peterson Sollers, of Baltimore, has selected Wednesday, February 23, as the date of her marriage to the Rev. Duncan Fraser, rector of Berkeley Memorial Church, Newport, R. I.

Miss Sollers made her home in Washington for several years with her aunt, the late Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, who died early in the winter. Because Miss Sollers is in mourning, her wedding will be extremely simple. The ceremony will take place at Memorial Church in Baltimore, and the bride-to-be hopes that her sister, Mrs. James Robertson, of Springfield, Ill., will be able to be matron of honor. Two young nieces and two cousins of Miss Sollers will walk up the aisle with her, but otherwise she plans to have no attendants.

Miss Sollers will come to Washington from Baltimore some time this week for a brief stay here. A graduate of Bryn Mawr College, she is a member of the Washington Junior League.

Slogans Imperil Peace, Hornbeck Tells Women

B. and P. Club's International Program Marked by Warning Catch Words Inciting Thoughtless Action Are Serious Threat.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Catch words and easy phrases, used to induce the public to unsound conclusions and incite unthinking action, are among the most serious threats to peace faced by this country, Stanley K. Hornbeck, political adviser of the State Department, asserted last night in an address before the Business and Professional Women's Club at its annual international relations program . . . a dinner at the Raleigh Hotel. Mr. Hornbeck, introduced by Miss Annabel Matthews, chairman of international relations for the club as well as president of the Women's Bar Association of Washington, deplored the tendency of persons "insufficiently possessed of a background of facts," making pronouncements on international affairs.

The misuse of words is the cause of more conflicts and complications than money or the love of it, defined in the Bible as the root of all evil, he said.

Urging the analysis of words and phrases and their significance, he quoted such slogans as: "Law—Not War," "War Is Unthinkable" and "I did not raise my boy to be a soldier." Discussing the last, he pointed out the responsibilities and obligations of citizenship, including those which involve the life and security of the country. Should we welcome the presence of an invading army enforcing its law upon our citizenry, he asked, and, if not, on whom should the task rest of protecting and preserving the Nation?

Fear of "Isms" Not Shared by Officials

Quoting President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull in recent discussions of national affairs and international policy, he pointed out that the fear of foreign "isms" held by alarmists "is not shrade by those charged with the defense of American democracy." There is no doubt expressed by them of its inherent vitality, he said, adding that the alarmist viewpoint had been common to mankind down through the ages.

International incidents themselves do not create war, said Dr. Hornbeck, unless, in the nations involved, there is a will to fight and a confidence that the rewards of victory would outweigh the cost.

If a world war comes, we cannot run away, he said, but neither is there reason to fear. There is reason, instead, to think and to evaluate our own position and the positions and objectives of other countries. With the intelligent use of our potentialities, there is no need to fear any "isms" from without.

Dr. Hornbeck discussed military preparedness, asserting it contributed not toward war but toward the maintenance of peace. He called attention to conditions throughout the world and the fact that our attitude and action must be regulated by circumstances.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

WALTER WINCHELL'S remark that the Federation of Women's Clubs planned to raise a million and a half and turn it over to an advertising company for a peace campaign, was not received in the nature of a bombshell at general federation headquarters. The women were chiefly interested to know where he thought they could get that amount of money. A little grapevine information as to likely sources will be welcomed.

• • • •

MRS. WILLIAM DICK SPORBORG, chairman of the Pan-American Commission, whose report will be made to the conference on the cause and cure of war Friday, was dividing her time yesterday between conference preparations and preparations for the broadcast last night on the General Federation of Women's Clubs' program for wise spending to help relieve the economic stress.

GEORGE FORT MILTON, widely known author and lecturer, who is now special adviser for the division of trade agreements in the State Department, will be guest of honor and speaker at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club today. And here's more news: Joseph P. Kennedy, who has been named Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, will be guest of honor next week.

MRS. ROBERT WHITNEY IMBRIE has issued invitations for a tea in honor of the Newspaper Women's Club, of which she is an honorary member, January 29 at 1016 Sixteenth street. This is a month of festive Saturdays for the girls of the club with a tea being given by Mrs. Charles Stanley White, another associate member, this week and Mrs. Imbrie's party next.

THE SIMPLE notice that the Political Study Club had its monthly meeting last Saturday afternoon with its president, Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, presiding, did not half tell the story about the club president's busy day. If she has many more like it she'll need a double or an understudy to help her out.

In the morning, as chairman of radio for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, she made her report to the board which was meeting in executive session at General Federation headquarters. At noon, she conducted a rehearsal for the installation of officers of the Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star for the District of Columbia, at which she acted as installing officer. At 2 o'clock, the Political Study Club convened at the Washington Club for a program followed by tea, at which she presided, and in the evening at 7 or thereabout, she was at the Mayflower for the installation ceremonies which were followed by a supper. Sunday she rested.

MISS MARGARET CUTHBERT, director of women's activities for N. B. C., came down at Mrs. Meritt's invitation to tell the women of the General Federation Board how they could use their influence to secure the kind of radio programs they want by letting sponsors and the broadcasting companies know when they are pleased with a program and writing a letter of protest when they find one of which they disapprove.

Miss Cuthbert also gave them a little idea of what it means to put on such a program as the Federation broadcast which is to be given this week under the Department of Public Welfare, of which Mrs. Clarence W. Fraim, of Delaware is chairman. The program will open in Philadelphia, with a greeting from Mrs. Fraim; pick-up J. Edgar Hoover, here in Washington; Maud Ballington Booth in New York and Judge Camille Kelley, of the Memphis Juvenile Court, at a Chicago station.

Clark, membership chairman, has inaugurated a membership campaign so as to have a special class of candidates to be initiated in honor of the visit.

In the meantime, tonight the alumni committee is sponsoring an oyster dinner as a benefit for the alumni association fund. It will be at Moose Hall from 5 to 7:30, with Mrs. Anna Wanger, Mrs. E. T. Deegan and officers of the chapter assisting.

Miss Patsy King, in colonial costume, will help serve. Mrs. Arthur Cecil is the guild president and Mrs. Eva Wheatley, chairman of ways and means, in charge of the dinner.

The latter is associated with the clerk's office of the Municipal Court.

Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, founder and president of the Entre Nous Club, entertained the members yesterday afternoon at tea at her home on Decatur street. The club, whose members have pledged themselves to serve others through personal philanthropy, heard reports of Christmas baskets distributed, clothing given both before and since the holidays; bags sent to Walter Reed Hospital and magazines given in large numbers.

INCIDENTALLY, there's politics brewing in the D. A. R. ranks, with more candidates being indorsed daily for state offices. Descendants of '78 Chapter has indorsed its member, Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg for State historian: Mrs. Ralph Griswold, who was indorsed by the Army and Navy Chapter for State chaplain, has withdrawn and her name will not come up for election.

Tomorrow election of alternates to the yearly congress will be the business of the Fort McHenry Chapter, which meets at the All States Hotel, at 7:30 p. m. Following the meeting, the chapter members will play cards.

The thirteenth annual conference on the cause and cure of war opens today at the Washington Hotel under leadership of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, veteran peace leader, of New Rochelle, N. Y., honorary chairman, and Miss Josephine Schain, of New York, chairman of the national committee on the Causes and Cure of War. Nearly 1,000 delegates and visitors have registered, hoping to aid in the discussions and in finding a formula for the maintenance of world peace.

Mrs. Frederick Beggs, of Wyckoff, N. J., chairman of the Marathon Round Table Committee, reported at a meeting of the executive committee yesterday afternoon that, since the first of September, 437 registrations have been made by groups throughout the country. Although there is a decrease of total registrations, in this first four months' period, 13 States show a decided increase and 12 of these are in the West and South, Mrs. Beggs pointed out.

Two courses concerned with "The Evolving Foreign Policy of the United States" are available this year, a preparatory course, "The United States and the World," and a new advanced course, based on the report of the National Defense Commission presented at the Chicago conference last January.

The Marathon Round Table project completed its fifth year in 1937 and is now halfway through the sixth. Established in 1932 by Mrs. Catt with the announced objective of building an effective public opinion capable of putting an end to war, it carried a challenge in the name of Marathon to continue until this objective was reached. By increasing efforts of State marathon chairmen and the co-operation of member organizations, registrations have increased from 315 in 1932, to 867 when registrations closed in July of 1937.

Mrs. Catt, who celebrated her seventy-ninth birthday January 9, brought to Washington with her a gift she had just received from women of the Philippines. It was in appreciation for her aid two years ago in raising a fund to help women of the Philippines in their work for suffrage and was intended to reach her on her birthday.

The inscription on a silver plate reads:

"In grateful acknowledgment of the moral and financial aid given by women of America through Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt to women of the Philippines through the National Federation of Women's Clubs in their struggle for national rights, culminating in ultimate victory April, 1937."

Mrs. Catt's leadership in the cause of peace followed directly the successful culmination of her work for woman suffrage as head of the National Woman Suffrage Association. Following passage of the amendment to the Constitution granting women votes, she formed the National League of Women Voters, an organization assigned to equip them for intelligent use of the franchise. With the league well under way, she founded the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War.

At the head of the program for the present conference on "A Present-Day Program for Peace," she is quoted in the assertion: "To rid the world of war is the greatest problem before the human race. It is not our problem alone but the responsibility of all the nations. The riddance will come when enough people in the world demand it."

Edwin Kaempf, organizer of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said the men sat down at 8:15 a. m. and planned to prevent any work being done anywhere in the plant.

A. E. Van Cleve, general manager of the plant, agreed 1,000 men struck.

Charging breach of contract on two counts—violation of seniority rights and discrimination against union leaders—Kaempf said the strike would last indefinitely.

Rep. Ramspeck Hails 55 Years Of Civil Service

Assails 'Vicious Circle' of 'Spoils;' Rally Tonight to Mark Anniversary.

The merit system "insures the management of our Government by persons whose chief interest is service to the public," Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, declared in a radio address last night.

"The spoils system gives us inefficiency, more expense and a personnel whose chief interest is politics rather than service," the veteran defender of the merit system in the House stated. "(It) creates a vicious circle tending unnecessarily to increase the public pay roll because our constituents ask us to secure jobs for them.

"If they give the jobs to our constituents, then they come back to us and demand larged appropriations and thus the circle revolves and the taxpayer is the goat."

Meanwhile, the fifty-fifth anniversary of establishment of the U. S. Civil Service—being nationally celebrated this week—will be observed tonight at a monster mass meeting in the Government Auditorium.

The meeting to have been held at noon today by the National Civil Service Reform League in the Willard Hotel, with Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, as the speaker, has been "indefinitely postponed," the league's offices here announced yesterday. The postponement was attributed to the inability of LaGuardia to appear.

Speakers at the mass meeting include Senators Bulow and O'Mahoney and Representative Ramspeck, who will discuss civil service affairs as seen from Capitol Hill; the three commissioners, Harry B. Mitchell, Mrs. Lucille F. McMillin and Samuel H. Ordway, jr.; Gilbert E. Hyatt, of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, and officers of the American Federation of Government Employes, sponsor of the meeting.

Rejection Slip.

Failed again. But that's all right; life has its ups and downs. And besides, we did dash off the suggestions rather hurriedly—which undoubtedly proves that haste makes waste and brings rejection slips every time. But it is to be consoled; for there yet will arise a man with sufficient poetry in his soul to give an adequate name to the G. A. O., N. F. F. E. News. They want a new name badly for the paper, offered two theater tickets as a prize for the best name submitted, and we jumped in the contest.

Now comes the rejection slip, signed reluctantly, no doubt, by Lee B. Shugar, The G. A. O., N. F. F. E. News editor. "Thanks a great deal for your suggestions of names that would be appropriate for the type of paper the News is. (You see, I am taking you seriously). There follows that usually 'I am sorry' thing, but I am heartily in favor of and in accord with your timely thought of 'G. A. O. Forever.' Until such time as someone will suggest a name that will be indicative of the Union interest in the News, we will use the name: 'G. A. O., N. F. F. E. News.'"

Coming to think of it now, what's the matter with the name the paper has? Somebody always wants to change something; but on this subject, one might grow endlesaly and annoyingly philosophical; and we're sorry we ever entered that contest, making a theater date predicated on winning those two free tickets!

That watchful Farm Credit Administration! Ten days ago, they started taking count of all the paper clips the boys and girls were wasting, estimating in nearly ethereal figures how many clips would be saved in a year (and how much dough this would mean to Uncle Farm Credit Administration) if the boys and girls weren't so careless with the clips. Now—the very patience of it!—they've searched the dictionary to see if Mr. Webster and his word brain trusters made any slips, or perhaps if the printers did Mr. Webster wrong. They caught him.

It was the watchful vise section that did it. "See 'usurious' in Webster's New International Dictionary, Edition of 1934, where, in the definition, 'exorbitant' is spelled with an h," they cry exultantly.

Fraud Trial Ready For Witnesses on Nolan, Jenkins

Ground work for the taking of testimony in the trial of William J. Nolan, former automobile dealer, and Benjamin D. Jenkins, an office associate in the now defunct Nolan firm, was laid by Justice Joseph W. Cox in District Court late yesterday when he overruled a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty and intimated he was prepared to begin hearing of witnesses today.

Much of yesterday's session was consumed in selecting a jury.

Nolan and Jenkins are under indictment on a presentment accusing them of 16 charges of false pretenses and one alleging they conspired to obtain $30,000 from the Universal Credit Co. in connection with conditional bills of sale.

Nolan has only recently completed a short jail term on a charge of bribing two witnesses in a divorce suit.

Gibson's Goes Down

Easily!

"GIVE me Gibson's" was a by-word at the famous bars of the 90's. Today, in far different surroundings, Gibson's is still in the limelight.

Men who know fine liquor ask one important question about a whiskey. "Does it go down easily?" And to Gibson's the answer has always been "yes".

Sip it slowly or fast, enjoy it in a highball or straight, you'll find that however you take it, it's easy to take. That's why everywhere you hear the same refrain:

"GIVE ME Gibson's"

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

The Roosevelt horseshoe continues as big as the great horseshoe dinner table at the White House . . . Today Justice Sutherland retires to make room for a second New Deal Justice . . . Soon there will be a third to succeed Cardozo, but the New Deal can't gain much ground there.

*PAJAMA PORTRAITS—8
STANLEY REED.

If big, easy-going, scholarly Stanley Reed has the edge in popularity among the score of Supreme Court possibilities, it is because he is one of the best-grounded, least nerve wracking and most logical of the convinced New Dealers . . . He doesn't make faces and yell at people; he combines a liberal mind with a conservative manner . . . He is charming, conciliatory and reassuring, and withal has the judicial temperament of a William Howard Taft or an Elihu Root . . . He has the knack of making inevitable reform seem not a cloudburst, but a gentle rain from heaven.

This paragraph appeared in this column on January 10, one week before President Roosevelt appointed Mr. Reed.*

If his luck holds out, President Roosevelt will appoint one or two more, perhaps to succeed McReynolds and Butler . . . If he appoints youngish, healthy men who take good care of themselves, as Supreme Court Justices always do, his appointees will have the last word on American law for at least 20 years.

* * * *

Thus the institution in the white marble palace will remain the lengthened shadow of one man until around 1960 . . . He can't, of course, prevent the hardening of arteries which brings on conservatism.

* * * *

"—one may sit till 1990"

The stony austerity of the Supreme Court exists largely in the mind of the beholder . . . When three or four justices begin to bait a cutaway-coated barrister with questions, the scene becomes more animated than any lower court I have ever seen.

* * * *

Occasionally the justices nudge each other, as Butler and Roberts did the other day, and exchange smiles over a whispered aside, while the pleader gets a little hot under the choler . . .

* * * *

One member who likes to give the audience the once over occasionally is Justice Stone; he seems to cherish a lively if restrained curiosity about the sort of people who sit so awestruck and listen to learned counsel.

* * * *

From an esthetic viewpoint, it is to be devoutly hoped that for one of his early appointments President Roosevelt can find a bearded barrister . . . Chief Justice Hughes, whose beard seems a little shorter than it was, is exactly right, for the center of the bench; may he remain there for decades.

* * * *

But to balance the bench correctly, there should be bearded justices at each end . . . Perhaps the newest appointees can be persuaded to grow beards . . . Maybe the 69 families would be happier about forthcoming decisions if Justice Black were to return from next summer's vacation with a vandyke . . . I'm strong for bearded justices; their judgements seem so inescapable.

* * * *

Despite his conservatism and his beard, Justice Sutherland (who was born in England, but looks more like a Mormon) has always seemed the most youthful member of the court. Th lively twinkle in his eyes, the erect alertness with which he followed counsel's arguments, made him a great favorite with the matinee audiences of women who flock to the marble palace for the Supreme Court thrill which, the connoisseurs tell me, is a greater thrill than a glimpse of Robert Taylor.

* * * *

Although Justice McReynolds will be 76 years old next month, it is doubtful that he is thinking of retiring. The impression is abroad in Washington that Mr. McReynolds will fight it out on that front if he lives to be 100 . . . And quite a few of the New Dealers don't see any harm in having one or two ultra-conservatives on the Supreme bench—if only to contribute their point of view.

* * * *

Next to a conversation with an insurance salesman, nothing brings you such deep regret that man is not immortal as a meditative afternoon spent at the Supreme Court . . . That this double distilled wisdom must pass, that such minds as these are at the mercy of perishable organs is, of course, the ultimate tragedy.

* * * *

I, for one, should like to see the President endow one justice with the nearest meager approach to immortality, by choosing one who is still in his thirties; a young man who will have a lively personal interest in what the Republic will be as it approaches the year 2,000; a justice who will dandle on his knee grandchildren who will be alive in the year 2050 . . . The New Deal ought to be running like clockwork by that time.

Truck Firms Support D. C. Safety Drive

Rep. Schulte Asks End of Alibis as Operators Defend Record.

Double-Parking Draws Fire in Session of Advisory Council.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Representatives of more than 50 Washington trucking concerns pledged support to the District's traffic safety crusade last night after a somewhat heated session with Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and members of the Traffic Advisory Council.

Meeting in the old House Office Building, the truck operators were told their drivers killed 12 persons last year. This said Schulte, "was 12 too many."

At first inclined to defend their drivers and present varied alibis for the fatality record, the fleet men were warned to co-operate — "or we will be forced to legislate rules which you probably won't like."

Asks End of "Alibis."

"We've got to stop alibiing for deaths," Schulte continued, "there is no need for that. We must have co-operation to fight this problem—and you fellows have got to help us. So, let's not alibi, let's drive traffic deaths from Washington streets."

Double-parked trucks, as adding to congestion and breeding accidents, drew fire not only from Schulte, but from members of the advisory council. The fleet operators, representing downtown department stores as well as other trucking concerns, were called upon to force their drivers to utilize every available space at the curb for loading and unloading.

"Members of Congress," said Schulte, "are set against this double-parking menace. We have no sympathy with the truck drivers who abuse this privilege."

Rising in defense of their drivers, the truck operators claimed that "double parking never killed anyone" and demanded to know the ratio of truck fatalities as against deaths caused by pleasure cars, cabs and buses.

They contend that truck drivers as a whole, considering the number of truck registrations and miles driven, "have a pretty good record."

"We are not interested in comparing figures," said Schulte, "we are interested in the immediate problem effecting trucks. The other vehicle operators will also be called in to offer their side."

Transit Firm Pledges Aid.

E. H. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., and a member of the advisory council, promised to correct driving faults of his operators with rigid penalties. New inspectors, uniformed and plain-clothes, he said, are being added in an effort to check adequately on the traffic practices of street cars and buses.

He urged an increased police force and a parking ban on flow streets to speed up traffic and relieve congestion.

After Ringgold Hart, general counsel for the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, suggested a definite program for the truck owner to follow, it was decided that the advisory council would draft a set of recommendations and hold a later meeting with the trucking heads.

Parking Ban Favored.

Abolition of all downtown parking appeared to receive the majority approval. A. B. Fletcher, of the Embassy Dairy, scored lack of parking facilities for delivery purposes and suggested a system of park-o-meters.

Lauding Maj. Ernest W. Brown and his police force as "one of the best outfits in the country," W. M. Deneen, of the Sanitary Grocery Co., suggested a method of controlling traffic by adoption of uniform laws understandable to the visitor and native alike.

Schulte, concurring in appeals for additional policemen, proposed a unit of mounted patrolmen to regulate traffic in the downtown area.

Careless Drivers Penalized.

In answer to a suggestion from Schulte that truck operators exercise better control ove their drivers, George W. O'Keefe, of the Hecht Co., pointed out that his concern penalizes careless driving by suspensions and dismissals.

Last night's meeting was the second in a series planned by Schulte, newly appointed chairman of a House traffic sub-committee. He said taxi owners and drivers would be called in next.

Members of the advisory council at the meeting included Merrill, Whitney Leary, auto dealer and chairman; R. H. Dalglish, chief engineer, Capital Transit Co.; C. W. Turner, Railway Express Agency; Selden M. Ely, former public school official; C. Melvin Sharpe, of the Potomac Electric Power Co.; L. C. Davis, president of the Diamond Cab Co., George V. Graham, contractor; Harry Bedell, manufacturer, and Edwin S. Hege, president of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association.

7 Persons Injured; Bus, Train Crash

Two persons were injured so badly they required hospital treatment and five others suffered from shock and minor hurts in the collision of a streetcar and bus in front of Union Station early last night.

Treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts were Charles Howe, 68, of 3222 Wisconsin avenue northwest, and Cassell, 32, of 438 Third street northeast. The others received treatment at their homes.

Uninjured passengers were transferred to another bus.

Chief Bares Divorce Mill, Expresses Fear for Tribesmen.

Chief Benjamin American Horse, whose Sioux ancesters participated in the Custer massacre, told a shocked Senate investigating committee yesterday of a "divorce mill" operating on his South Dakota Reservation.

An Indian, he said, could separate from his mate on any pretext if she was willing and he had $15 to pay the junior judges of the recently organized Indian court. The wrinkled chief said that the general conditions under whcih Indians live are "immoral."

"I have been converted to Christianity," Chief American Horse said gravely, "and have been taught that divorced people went to the left side of hell. I don't like to see all our Indians going to hell."

Chief Spotted Owl, of the Pine Ridge Reservation, talking through an interpreter, said he was under the impression that all Indians should do is "obey the Ten Commandments." Instead he found that "everything we do violates some Government regulation."

The Indians testified before the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, which is investigating operation of the Wheeler-Howard act, now under the fire of one of the authors, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana. The act reversed a long-standing policy—that Indians should be assimilated by the rest of the population—and provided that they could live together on reservations under self-approved constitutions and charters.

Citizens' Group Of 16th Street Defends P. U. C.

Rejects Public Ownership, Other Transportation Conference Ideas.

Considering a five-point program submitted by the Citizens' Conference of Transportation, more than 100 members of the Sixteenth Street Citizens Association last night strongly voiced their faith and confidence in the present Public Utilities Commission and opposed Government ownership of transportation systems in the District.

Approving the report of M. J. Cairns, chairman of the association's public utilities committee, members agreed the question of fare increases, "should be left in the capable hands of members of the Public Utilities Commission."

Public ownership of District transportation systems was attacked as unsound by members who accepted the committee's suggestion that "until such time as Government ownership proves to be good business, we are opposed to publicly owned transportation systems here."

Oppose People's Counsel.

Expressing opposition to establishment of a People's Counsel in Washington, the association voiced the opinion that "funds appropriated to the People's Counsel could be better used by the Utilities Commission."

Fourth item of the conference's program—providing for reorganization of the commission—also was opposed by the group who expressed satisfaction with the present personnel of the Utilities Commission, which "is composed of capable men of the highest integrity and deeply concerned with the people's welfare."

Considering the last suggestion of the conference' program concerning construction of subways as a solution to District traffic problems, the association expressed the opinion that "studies of plans for construction of subways in the District should originate in the Public Utilities Commission and be handled by that body."

Following the regular business meeting, members listened to an address by Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Metropolitan Police Department, on "Protection Work of Policewomen." A motion picture presentation, "George Washington's Railroad," concluded the meeting.

Lincoln Park.

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution urging that more adults be admitted to the Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Hospial.

The resolution, introduced by Mrs. Harriet Moose, chairman of the association's welfare committee, also provided that a part of the $650,000 appropriation recommended for the establishment of health centers be used for building an annex to Gallinger Hospital. As a further measure for relieving congestion at Galinger, it was proposed that some of the cases which would ordinarily go there be sent instead to Columbia Hospital.

Deaf Man Found In Street, Victim Hit-Run Auto

A 71-year-old man partially deaf, was found lying unconscious in the street at Eastern and Georgia avenues northwest, yesterday, apparently the victim of a hit-run driver.

With return of consciousness after he was found, the man identified himself as John L. Neeb, 7611 Eastern avenue, an employe of the Capital Transit Co. He was treated at his home for bruises of the head and back.

Because of his hearing disability, Neeb was unable to tell police what had happened to him. Police said they believed he had been struck by a hit-run motorist whil waiting for a streetcar.

Income Levy Split Delays D.C. Hearing

Consideration With District Budget Bill Is Sought.

By James D. Secrest.

Drafting of the District's new tax bill struck a snag yesterday when income tax proponents balked at a plan to make the controversial income levy a separate issue from the problem of balancing the 1939 budget.

The sub-committee, headed by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, adjourned until tomorrow after an executive session that threatened to split the group before it reports to the House District Committee.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, led the fight on the proposal of Chairman Nichols that a bill be drawn renewing the business privilege tax and the $1.75 realty and personal property levy.

Supported by Representative Cole (Republican), of New York, Dirksen insisted that the income tax be written into the measure, although with a small tax, so that it might meet the test of Congressional action and a court ruling.

Previously, it had been indicated that the sub-committee might offer the income tax as a separate proposal, either in a different bill or as an amendment to the District revenue measure on the House floor.

As at least three members of the five-man sub-committee are supporters of the income tax plan it appeared possible that it may be adopted by the sub-committee and made a part of the bill.

A compromise plan which will appease the income tax proponents and yet assure a House vote on the proposal may be worked out before the end of the week.

While still forecasting that the tax bill ultimately will be only a modified renewal of the present law, Nichols indicated he would resist any attempt to include all three proposed levies in the bill.

He hinted that if the sub-committee votes for the income tax, he will then move to scrap the business privilege levy.

Nichols denied emphatically that the sub-committee is considering boosting the rate of the business privilege tax from two-fifths to three-fifths of 1 per cent.

"The present gross receipts tax will raise a minimum of $2,600,000. I am informed," he said. "The real estate and personal property rate rise of 25 cents will produce another $3,000,000. There's your $5,000,000 and more."

District officials have estimated that the 1939 deficit under the Budget Bureau recommendations will range from $3,250,000 to $5,000,000 depending upon the yield of the business privilege tax this year and whether the $765,000 cost of street lighting is assessed against the general revenue or the highway fund.

Seal Submits Two Bills.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal submitted to the sub-committee drafts of two bills yesterday. One contains the business privilege tax, including numerous modifications so as to eliminate inequities, and continuation of the $1.75 realty rate. The other proposes an income tax.

While the business privilege levy rate is left blank in the bill, Nichols said that the fact is not significant. Some District officials, however, have hinted that they may suggest a higher rate if their opinion is asked.

Nichols declined to divulge the proposed amendments to the gross receipts tax until after the sub-committee has adopted them, but he did state that the draft does not include an amendment to exempt outside firms that do business in Washington.

Aged Man Found Dead on Bus Here

An elderly white man was found dead last night when the New York-Washington bus on which he was a passenger arrived at the terminal, Twelfth street and New York avenue northwest. A letter in his pocket identified him as Slater L. Bots, of Soldiers' Home.

Bots boarded the bus at Baltimore, according to M. Creeks, the driver, who said Bots frequently traveled to and from Baltimore.

Dr. Ross Jung of Casualty Hospital attributed death to natural causes.

V.F.W. Officer Sees Threat of Pension Demand to Aid Unemployed.

Daniel E. Campbell, past department commander of the Veterans of Foregn Wars and national chairman of the organization's committee on unemployment and civil service preference for veterans, declared last night that unless private industry shows a willingness to employ former service men, veterans' associations will be forced to demand pensions.

Campbell, speaking at a forum conducted by Equality-Walter Reed Post 284 of the V. F. W., said that the organization is making strenuous attempts to induce employers to hire veterans. He pointed out that most of the men who saw service in the World War are now over 40 and are therefore at an age when it is difficult to obtain jobs.

Edward K. Inman, another past department commander, predicted that within a few years pensions must be granted to unemployable veterans. He asserted, however, that no pensions will ever be asked for able-bodied men who can "carry on."

Other speakers were Michael Thomas, commander of Victory Post of the American Legion; Ralph H. Carlin, of Miami, past department commander of Florida, and John J. Crim, national legislative representative of the Army and Navy Union. Crim expressed belief that in a few years ex-service men would form a Nation-wide union which could be "the bargaining power of the Nation." George McLeish, commander of Equality-Walter Reed Post, presided at the forum.

Mrs. Hagner, 84, Dies After Fall

Mrs. Caroline R. D. Hagner, lifelong resident of Georgetown, died Sunday a little more than two months after she suffered internal injuries in a fall in her home at 1739 N street northwest.

Mrs. Hagner was the mother of Robert D. Hagner, Montgomery County Commissioner, and the daughter of the late Col. Robert P. Dodge and Mrs. Dodge. She was 84 years old.

For more than 30 years Mrs. Hagner had worked for the Washington Gas Light Co. Her husband was Randall Hagner, well-known Washington attorney, who died about 40 years ago. He was the uncle of Randall Hagner, real estate dealer, who died here recently.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today in the Oak Hill Cemetery Chapel.

House Strikes Out D.C. Building Fund

An appropriation of $2,500,000 for continuation of construction of the Government Printing Office annex was stricken from the Treasury-Post Office supply bill on the House floor yesterday on a point of order raised by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York.

Taber's action followed the elimination on another point of order of a proviso that the exterior construction be of the same material as originally planned, viz., brick.

Representative Crowe (Democrat), of Indiana, raised the first point of order so that Indiana limestone might be used on the building's exterior.

Vigilantes Formed To Watch Officials For Montgomery

Residents of Montgomery County last night organized a new form of "vigilante" committee, aimed at citizen vigilance in the operations of the county government.

To be known as the Non-sectional Citizens League, the organization will name officers to watch the conduct of county officials, it was decided at a meeting of 45 residents in the county building at Bethesda.

William L. Taggart was named chairman of the league. Richard Blaisdell and Justice of the Peace Ernest D. Houghton were named vice chairmen. The vice chairman was assigned to watch aspects of the county government, and others will be appointed.

Naval Bill Asks Torpedo Works At Alexandria

$1,277,000 Would Be Provided to Put Factory Into Production.

Reopening of the torpedo factory in Alexandria, Va., is provided for in the 1939 naval appropriation bill laid before Congress yesterday.

The measure permits the expenditure in the next fiscal year of $1,277,000 "to equip and get the establishment at Alexandria into production." Later, an additional appropriation of $1,229,000 would be needed to complete equipment.

Rear Admiral W. L. Furlong, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, recommended the reopening of the Alexandria station in testimony before a House appropriations subcommittee, made public today.

The Newport, R. I., torpedo station, he said, is operating at capacity production and could not meet the needs of the expanding naval building program.

Admiral Furlong also explained that it would be quicker and cheaper to place the Alexandria station in operation than to provide additional facilities at Newport or elsewhere.

Opposition to the move was expressed, however, by Representative Aime J. Forand, of Rhode Island, who said he feared the operation of the station at Alexandria might serve as an entering wedge for "syphoning off" the naval activities at Newport.

In his testimony before the House sub-committee on naval appropriations several weeks ago he pointed out that the harbor at Newport is "so well protected that occupation of the place is practically impossible."

He added, "on the other hand, if the enemy should attack, and capture the Capital, as was done once before, they would come up the Potomac River, and, in coming up the river they would find the torpedo plant at Alexandria, the radio-signal station at Arlington, the naval aviation base and the gun factory here at Washington, all of which could be tied up by simply blocking the mouth of the river."

Waitresses Protest Wage Fixing Move

Speaker for Group Says Loss of Jobs to Men Is Feared.

A contingent of waitresses appeared at the minimum wage conference yesterday and protested against any legal wage for women in their organization.

Miss Tillie Miazga, representing 25 waitresses in a combination restaurant-night club establishment, told the conference that her coworkers were fearful they would be replaced by men, should a minimum wage be set above the present scale.

"At the present time we are paid $1 a day as salary," Miss Miazga explained, "but we average anywhere from $2.50 to $3.50 a day in tips."

Many girls at this downtown restaurant are making from $110 to $150 each month, she said.

"We are absolutely against any minimum wage, because we are afraid that the management will replace us with men," she declared, "and men are not paid any minimum."

Ruth Carroll, colored, representing the United Cafeteria Employes, Local 417, affiliated with the C. O. O., urged a minimum wage for her group of from $18.50 to $20 a week.

The union, which is composed of many Government cafeteria workers, was also against the inclusion of tips in the considerations for a minimum scale.

Miss Carroll, employed by the Welfare Recreation Association, which serves 23 Government buildings in the District, stated that at least 400 women workers in this field were receiving an average weekly pay of $12.

"We receive 25 cents an hour and work about 40 hours a week," she stated.

The Washington committee of the National Women's Trade Union, which told the conference they represented between 15,000 and 20,000 Washingtonians, both as employes and consumers, opposed the proposal that tips be included in the consideration of the minimum wage.

Miss Julia Katz, representing the union, declared:

"We score this proposal not only as an attempt to evade the purpose of the law, which is to guarantee the employers responsibility to pay a living minimum wage, but also as a means of bringing back and perpetuating those evils which trade unions, labor legislation and fair-minded employers are attempting to eliminate."

Espionage Feared.

These are, Miss Katz said:

1. Making the minimum wage the maximum wage.
2. Speedup: The proposal of the the employers would oblige them to pay lower wages to workers receiving higher tips, than those receiving less tips.
3. Insecurity of position.
4. Espionage: It is inevitable, in a procedure where the employer claims the earnings of workers as part of his wages to them, that spying and check-up be introduced to further break down the morale and co-operation between workers and put a premium on dishonesty.

"Tipping becomes a charge only when it is diverted to the employer," Miss Katz declared. "At present there are no signs in restaurants demanding that tips be paid, and the act is voluntary not obligatory to the customer."

Miss Katz maintained that customers will feel that the establishment of a minimum wage does not prohibit continued reward to the waitress by tipping.

Central Union Asks Ouster of Elwood Street

Labor Group Calls Welfare Head 'Antagonistic' to Their Aims.

Removal of Elwood Street as director of public welfare was requested of the District Commissioners in a resolution adopted last night by the Washington Central Labor Union in a meeting at Typographical Temple. Street is alleged to be "inefficient" and "antagonistic" to interests of labor.

Denouncing Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, as a "czar," the Central Union ridiculed his program of vocational guidance asserting that he "has neither an interest in nor a sympathy for the citizens who would be affected by vocational education."

Dr. Ballou was charged with a determination "to ignore labor in connection with his proposed work in vocational education." The union indorsed a letter to Representatve Reuben T. Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, member of District and labor committees, accusing Ballou of being "much more interested in building up his machine here and in making a paper set-up than in helping the citizens."

The letter states that "the latest trick is to ask some Federal officials in vocational work to come in on a public meeting with the school officials so as to make it look as if the Federal officials were approving of this bad local situtaion."

Judge Edward M. Curran was recommended as District Attorney for the District. The union recorded its opposition to a sales tax for the District and proposed a graduated income tax and an inheritance tax.

Boycott of Japanese goods was indorsed, as was H. R. 7710, a bill providing for shorter hours for firemen.

The following officers were elected for 1938: President, John Locher; vice president, Charles B. McClosky; recording secretary, Frank J. Coleman; financial secretary Robert C. Lester; treasurer, J. E. Toone; sergeant at arms, Michael A. Tozzollo; assistant sergeant at arms, John Eagleston; trustees, Frank W. Lee, Harry J. Thompson and D. C. Dow.

Noses of Great Need Painting To Be Perfect

Make-up Expert Discloses Secrets of His Trade in Mending 'Horns.'

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—Max Factor, whose grease paint makes many an actor look handsomer than nature made him, and who, therefore, ought to know what he's talking about, reported today on the unfortunate noses of Hollywood's great.

He named names, too. He even charged that the proboscis of Robert Taylor was "somewhat top-heavy."

"It is slightly too prominent where it joines the forehead and not quite prominent enough, comparatively speaking, at its tip," he said. "Consequently it must be shadowed at the top and highlighted at the bottom."

About the only perfect nose among the Hollywood ladies, he said, belongs to Miss Greta Garbo. All it needs for movie scene is a coat of uniform yellow paint.

Joan Crawford's smeller is so highly defined that it must be shaded at its tip. He said Miss Myrna Loy's nose had to be highlighted "to emphasize its dimunitive chubbiness."

Shirley Not Immune.

He charged that the experts won't even leave Shirley Temple's nose untampered.

"Two freckles on it usually are outlined carefully with powder in order to emphasize these typical blemishes of childhood," he reported.

Factor said that the make-up men had to make the noses of both William Powell and Leslie Howard look smaller than they really are, and that even the perfect profile nose of J. Barrymore must be retouched for full-face views.

There are lots of folks, though, who are making good on the screen without benefit of paint, Factor's included, said Ernest Lubitsch, director of some of the sexiest pictures that Hollywood ever turned out. That's no slur on Factor, either.

"Many people, I think, must credit part of their achievements in public life to their screen and radio personalities," he said.

"Take, for instance, John L. Lewis. I don't know whether his personality appeals to the people or scares 'em, but I believe that he ought to have those eyebrows of his insured. They're magnificent in the newsreels."

Lubitsch, who's just finished "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" and now is angling for another sophisticated story to put on the screen, mentioned President Roosevelt as possessor of a great picture personality.

"And so are Al Smith and Jimmy Walker," he said. "Mayor Walker, in particular, is marvelous. Even Calvin Coolidge had a screen personality of his own. It was solid. When you looked at him, you had confidence in him."

Topping all of these as possessor of what it takes with a movie audience, Lubitsch said, is Hailie Selassie.

"He is wonderful," Lubitsch continued. "He is one of the kindliest-looking, most intelligent-appearing old codgers ever to be seen in the newsreels."

All Are Actors.

Lubitsch said he believed that most public men had something of that indefinite thing called screen-personality, or they never would have achieved fame in that line in the first place.

"It's easily demonstrated," he said. "By nature, they're showmen. They've got to be. Now take scientists. They usually don't make good screen personalities. To be good in the movies, you've got to be an actor, whether you realize it or not, and acting is the very antithesis of science.

"Fact is, when I do see a scientist on the screen who makes a good impression there, I don't have much faith in his science."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

"The Buccaneer", Accelerated by Historical Event, Is Nationally Acclaimed as an Epochal Production

De Mille Is Hailed by Country's Foremost Magazines for Skill of His Work; Ina Claire Jittery on First Nights; Mr. Bergman Pays a Visit; Concerning "Senator Ford;" Civic Theater Joins Contributors to Fund; Benny Misses Missus; Theater Notes.

NOT in recent years has any picture aroused quite the professional and lay interest that has been awakened by Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The Buccaneer," accorded a socalled "sneak preview" in Loew's Palace Theater last Thursday night.

The national premiere of the tentative final form of the film availed itself of New Orleans' 123d anniversary celebration of the Battle of New Orleans as an entering wedge to public attention. Encomiums fluttered around the head of Mr. De Mille, on this occasion, like feathers in a gale of gusty enthusiasm. Simmered down to its final analysis, all of this lusty hurrah resolved itself into a critical consensus that Mr. De Mille has emerged as the protagonist of a new form of cinematic expression. A new form, that is, for him.

BELL.

This is all very encouraging. In the foggy matutinal hours shortly following the Palace preview, this department had the temerity to applaud the producer-director's sprouting of a new set of wings—an opinion that found its way into print in the Sabbath issue of The Post. One always wonders when setting down such snap judgment under the stress of multifarious duties that give little time for ordered thought—especially on Thursday nights—whether or not he is completely crazy or only mildly insane. I am beginning to have hopes for the fragments of sanity that still survive.

The January 12 issue of Time and the January 15 issue of the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the motion picture trade journals, both corroborate our hasty view that it is a new De Mille that reveals himself in "The Buccaneer."

All of this is merely to say that "The Buccaneer" is a film achievement that should be awaited with eager anticipation by all lovers of the cinema at its best. It will not be released for national distribution until some time in February and I suspect that no definite playing dates have as yet been set for Washington.

But when it does come along, don't say I didn't tell you—perhaps too far in advance to do very much good.

* * * *

That eminent practitioner of the theater, Mr. Leonard Bergman, executive administrator of the estate of the late A. L. Erlanger, which controls the National Theater in this city, was a week-end, overnight visitor in the Capital. Mr. Bergman whisked into town Sunday night and left the same way yesterday afternoon at 4. Eddie Plohn, manager of the National, was, I think, the only one who knew about it until it was too late. There was a reason for Len's secrecy. He became a bridegroom on December 15 and this was his first visit to town since. He probably had no desire to pay all those checks! Congratulations, anyway, even if we were not in on this particular "sneak showing."

* * * *

It seems that a column or two ago this department raised an eyebrow over the matter of Ina Claire's opening her new Gilbert Miller production of Frederic Lonsdale's new comedy of "Once Is Enough" in New Haven, instead of Washington, her old home town. The thing flew back in my face yesterday, when Bernard Simon, representing Mr. Miller, dropped by the desk to put me gently in my place.

Miss Claire, one is led to believe, experiences exquisite attacks of the jitters on all of her opening nights. Especially is this true in New York, where she knows so many people that the task of assuming a role alien to her own nature and inclinations strikes terror to her heart, because they all will know she is "acting." Next in her dread, so Mr. Simon tells me, comes Washington, where she grew up as Ina Fagan and sprouted the first ambitions to step out and show the world what America's foremost comedienne ought to be like.

In other words, Miss Claire is so anxious to give a perfect first-night performance in "Once Is Enough" in Washington that she is doing the three-day tune-up in New Haven to make assurance doubly sure.

Everything considered, this seems to be fair enough and probably deserves thanks rather than censure. But real first nights are a lot of fun, at that—for everybody except those who are in them.

This "Senator Ford of Michigan," who is coming along to the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday, is the same clever monologist who fooled a great many people at the recent annual dinner and dance of the Variety Club, at the Willard, sometime back in November, if I have my memory on straight. On that evening, a slender and dignified gentleman in white tie and tails stepped to the microphone and deluded a majority of those present into believing that he actually was a member of the United States' highest legislative body, on the loose for the evening. His remarks were pungent and witty and set the crowd on its collective ear. To those present who remembered the distinctive style of the late Ezra Kendall, the "Senator" seemed too good a monologist to be true as a statesman. And that is the way it has come out. The Senate, as a matter of fact, might be a lot better off if he were in it. But what would vaudeville do?

So that last bulletin dropped on a desk that looks as if that "Hurricane" had just passed this way brings word that the Washington Civic Theater's production of John van Druten's play of "The Distaff Side" has been added to the list of attractions giving special performances for the President's Birthday Fund.

The Government Printing Office employees are sponsoring an extra presentation of this "comedy of women" in their own auditorium on the night of January 29. The entire production will be moved from the Wardman Park Theater to the Government Printing Office for this occasion, just as "Between the Devil" is being brought all the way from the Imperial Theater, in New York, to the National next Sunday night. This will be the first time, incidentally, that the Civic Theater ever will have given a performance on any other stage but Wardman's.

The arrangements for this performance are being made by a committee headed by William Smith. All of the profits will be donated to the Warm Springs Foundation for the combat of infantile paralysis.

Nice work is what I always say—or is it "nice going?"

This is the first local engagement since a time when memory runneth not to the contrary that Benny Davis, whose "Star Dust Revue of 1938" is providing the stage entertainment at Loew's Capitol this week, hasn't introduced the charming Mrs. Davis from the stage. Always she has taken a bow and more often than not she has sung a song and done a bit of a dance, just as a reminder that she was a pretty swell trouper on her own account. Since Mrs. Davis is at home in New York it would be a little difficult for her to do her usual stint here this week. But she may be down later. And later, too, there will be something said here about Benny and his present eminence as a discoverer of new stage talent, he having taken the place of the fabled Gus Edwards, of an earlier generation, in this field. Gus, by the way, so Benny told me in the lobby of the Palace last Thursday night, is in a desperate state of health on the West Coast. That was not pleasant news, because Gus is an elegant person, too.

The number of available orchestra seats for the "command performance" of "Between the Devil"—before the house is entirely sold out for one of the most notable evenings in Washington's theatrical annals—at the National Thetaer next Sunday night, is gradually being whittled down to a handful. Not so gradually, either. They are going like the hot cakes of legend—although, personally, I never have been knocked up against the curbstone by a hot cake going anywhere in particular. However, the point is that you had better get down there in a hurry if you want yours. A little more delay and they won't be there.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—The longer I stay in Hollywood, the more I am amazed that motion pictures make money. Producers violate every rule of common sense, and, in spite of the violation, make millions. For instance, there is their playful little habit of changing the titles of their pictures.

SONJA HENIE.

Each major studio spends hundreds of thousands of dollars every year on publicity, the principal purpose of which is to "sell" the public in advance on a forthcoming production. When Sam Glotz decides to produce an epic called "Little Miss Muffet," he summons his publicity chiefs and tells them to make the public "Muffet" conscious.

* * * *

They carry out the order and flood the magazines and newspapers with copy. And then, just as public interest is mounting, Sam gets a brain storm and starts changing the title. After five or six changes—and as many expensive new advertising campaigns, the picture is finally released under the title of "The Spider's Threat." And a million dollars worth of publicity is wasted.

* * * *

A current example in point is the new Sonja Henie picture. It went into production under the title "Bread, Butter and Rhythm." That was changed to "Hot and Happy," which in turn gave way to "Happy Ending." According to this morning's announcement, the picture will be released as "Happy Landing." It makes life tough for a movie columnist.

Cesar Romero had a cook whose kitchen artistry made him the envy of all his friends. Actors have been known to gain as much as five pounds via a single dinner in the Romero manse—and, in spite of that catastrophe, go away in a state of bliss. But a month or so ago, Hilda informed Cesar that she was leaving—"a better job elsewhere," she said, turning a deaf ear to his entreaties and offers. And a few evenings later Sonja Henie invited Cesar to "drop in for dinner." He did—and with each successive, delicious course, settled deeper and deeper into gloom. "What's the matter with you?" Sonja demanded. "I have just one question to ask," said Cesar. "Is your cook named Hilda?" She was—and Cesar went home, recalling bitterly how the Henie, dining at his house, had praised the cooking, and reflecting upon the perfidy of women.

Never encounter Harry Garson, Hollywood's promoter de luxe, without remembering one of the most hilarious chapters in Filmville history. On the strength of a poster-sized photo of an orang-utan and a wild story that an East Indian tribe used apes as warriors, Harry induced "Uncle Carl" Laemmle to finance an expedition. Arrived in Batavia, he discovered that the only orang there was an ancient specimen in a government zoo—but that fact merely sharpened the Garson imagination. The daily rushes, shipped back to Hollywood for development, were "terrific." But finally Harry, who could not cut his film on location, made a slip. "Uncle Carl" was in the projection room, thrilling while an orang captured a native girl. Suddenly, the ape stood erect, bellowed "Cut!"—and out of the skin stepped Mr. Harry Garson. But here's the pay-off: the picture, re-shot in Hollywood, cost $350,000—and earned nearly a million!

Arguments about Deanna Durbin's age have raged ever since her debut in "Three Smart Girls." The studio says—and offers to prove—that she is now 14. Some Boulevard know-it-alls, going to the other extreme, argue that she is in her twenties. And now, I hear, a man who claims to have been her agent, or something of the kind, swears that he has evidence that she is 17 years and 8 months of age. The mere mention of her name in the average Hollywood gathering prompts a torrid debate. Personally, I give not a single darn whether she is 14 or 54. She has a grand voice and a grand personality. Her pictures are real entertainment.

Plans Home.

For weeks Wayne Morris has been visiting new homes of friends and making notes on the most attractive features, all of which he will incorporate in the home he will soon start building on two acres of land in the San Fernando Valley. Priscilla Lane is helping with the ideas, too, of course.

Fanny Brice Is An Expert 'Parer'

Fanny Brice feels that she now qualifies for the potato peeler's union.

For on the set of "Everybody Sing" the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress went through a large lug of potatoes without even flinching.

Miss Brice, who plays a maid in the picture, had kitchen scenes with Allan Jones in which she had to peel potatoes.

The scene, which is part of a musical number, was a very long one. When she finished rehearsals, the actress felt she had peeled enough.

By the time seven different camera set-ups had been completed, she found that there were only three potatoes left in the box.

"I thought I might as well do a good job," said Miss Brice, "so I stayed overtime to peel those last three."

Clark Griffith
50 Years in Baseball
By Shirley Povich

Griffith Moves to Illinois for His Health; Loses First Professional Game, Making Five Errors Himself; Is Signed by Milwaukee Team.

Chapter Three.

SON OF A RUGGED FATHER and sturdy mother, reared in the wide-open spaces of the early West, Clark Griffith, as a boy, was not healthy. At the age of 11 he was subject to prolonged spells of alternate chills and fever. It was the malarial fever of the Missouri lowlands, then described as the ague.

Tenderly his widowed mother ministered to the lad, sought medical advice from her neighbors. Young Clark was excused from all labors on the farm, his schooling interrupted by the frequent attacks that made of him a shut-in for long periods. For two years, his health was the constant worry of Widow Griffith.

A kindly neighbor, John Batts, father of the boy who had killed Isaiah Griffith in a hunting accident 11 years before, finally diagnosed young Clark Calvin's illness as malaria, dreaded disease of the lowland country.

"Widow Griffith," he warned, "unless you move that boy out of this part of Missouri, he's a-goin' to die."

With that stern warning ringing in her ears, Mrs. Griffith quickly made her decision. Posting the Griffith homestead for sale, she hastily packed all movable belongings, herded her brood of five onto a train of the 1882 vintage and sought shelter with relatives in Bloomington, Ill.

Clark Calvin Griffith was 13 years old when the family quit Missouri for Illinois, where he was first to achieve baseball fame. But baseball had already entered his life. At the age of 10, Clark Griffith was the mascot of the Stringtown team which had taken a shine to the game that the soldiers had brought back from the war.

Stringtown Vs. Possum Trot—With "Store" Ball.

BASEBALL HAD BEEN INVENTED only 40 years before by Gen. Abner Doubleday at Cooperstown, N. Y. It was still a crude kind of game as the Missouri teams played it in 1879 with home-spun balls and rules that had long been outmoded. But rivalry was tense among the teams of the nearby settlements and it was to be a great day in the life of young Clark Griffith when Stringtown met the roundly hated team from Possum Trot.

For on that day, they were to play with a "store" ball, a genuine horsehide baseball that was to cost a dollar and a quarter. A collection among the members of the team was taken to raise the sum for the "store" ball. No mere yarn ball would suffice for the important game. Often Griffith has told the story of that ball.

"We gave the dollar and a quarter to one of our boys and sent him on horseback to Nevada, Mo., 12 miles away, to buy the store ball. Before game time he brought it back, and everybody was on edge at the thought of batting a genuine baseball.

"Possum Trot was first at bat and their second hitter whacked the ball solidly. It burst completely open, yarn flew in all directions. We couldn't believe our eyes until we investigated. Then we discovered that the fellow had bought a 25-cent ball and pocketed the extra dollar. The game broke up, but the embezzler took it on the run and never dared to show his face in Stringtown again."

Young Griffith's Health Improves in Illinois Climate.

THE ILLINOIS CLIMATE wrought a beneficial change in the health of young Clark Griffith. The malaria spells vanished and, though still a bit undersized, the lad was tolerably strong. At Bloomington and Normal, Ill., the Griffiths were among friends and relatives; particularly the Dillons, who had settled Tazewell County in great numbers.

Prospering from a boarding house she conducted at Normal, Mrs. Griffith re-installed her young children in school, but the eldest son, Earl, betook himself to Montana, there to become a cowpuncher. And Clark Griffith, at the age of 13, entered Normal's Public High School.

In company with the town kids, Clark Griffith often sneaked into the Normal College grounds and there it was that he first glimpsed baseball and played the game according to the up-to-date rules of 1883. In that year, the "new" rules were to the effect that seven—not eight—called balls entitled the batter to take his base; the catcher was required to move behind the plate for the third strike instead of catching the ball on the bounce; foul balls that were caught on the bounce were no longer outs; and any player besides the catcher who wore a glove was considered a sissy. Two years later a rule was passed permitting one side of the bat to have a flat surface.

Too small to play for his high school team, young Griffith haunted the diamonds where pickup games were played and began to fancy himself as a catcher. He was proving adept at that job and began to merit the respect of the town kids. When he decided he would like to try pitching, there were no objections.

At 16, young Griffith had a local reputation as a pitcher. Control was his forte, inasmuch as his small frame permitted him to impart no great speed to the ball, and his fame began to spread. Bitter rivals of the section were the Danville and Hoopeston town teams. From Hoopeston came an offer of $10 to Griffith, if he would take the mound against Danville.

Young Pitcher Wins 13 and Loses Two in First Season.

THAT TEN DOLLARS REPRESENTED more money than young Griffith knew existed in available cash. His later-day friends declared Griffith accepted the offer so quickly that the Hoopeston folks instantly regretted the generosity of their proposition. In Hoopeston, which, ten years later, was to be the birthplace of famed Outfielder Sam Rice, Griffith won his first game as a professional pitcher.

The following year, 1888, found Griffith making his debut in organized baseball. Bloomington, Ill., home of the famed Charley "Hoss" Radbourne, big league pitching ace of the era, held a franchise in the Interstate League, and the 17-year-old Griffith was signed as a pitcher. Later to be known as the Three-Eye League, the Interstate League comprised such teams as Decatur, Peoria, Evansville and Davenport.

Even as did Gen. George Washington, who lost his first command while defending Fort Duquesne for the British against the French and Indians, Clark Griffith learned to accept adversity early in his career. For he was beaten in his first pitching effort for Bloomington, on May 14, 1888.

Beaten though he was in his first pitching appearance in organized baseball, Griffith was hardly disgraced. The records of that game at Bloomington reveal that he outpitched his foe from Decatur, how he allowed only five hits, but lost the game, 5 to 3—because of ten errors by the Bloomington team. Young Griffith's pitching that day was commendable, indeed, but his fielding was something else again. Five of those ten Bloomington errors were contributed by young Griffith, himself.

Evidently young Griffith learned how to field his position with great suddenness, because it is recorded that in that same season of 1888 with the Bloomington team, the 17-year-old lad won 13 games and lost only 2, and took rank as the leading pitcher in the Interstate League.

Excited by the feats of their home-grown pitcher, Bloomington folks in the summer of 1888 arranged with the Milwaukee team of the Western League to play an exhibition game at Bloomington. Actually, how good was this Griffith? That was a prime topic in Bloomington. Milwaukee would be the test.

TOMORROW: Seventeen-year-old Clark Griffith, making his debut in the Western Association, lets St. Paul down with six hits, winning 8 to 1.

Massanutten Wins Swim Events Here

Western High Mermen Lose Return Match by 48-18 Score.

Winning every event, Massanutten's superior swimming team swept through its second meet of the season with Western High last night in the Ambassador Pool, 48-18.

The Cadets registered their second triumph in as many meets with the local swimmers, having defeated them in the first meet at Massanutten, last week.

To Ralph Kiefer, younger brother of Adolph, holder of every backstroke record in existence, went the 100-yard backstroke event. The kid brother of the Texas University star jumped out in front at the first turn and splashed his way to victory over Gray, of Western, in 1 minute 8.2 seconds. Boyd, of Western, was third.

An upset was registered in the fancy diving contest when Don Van Camp, nationally ranked scholastic diver, accumulated more points than his teammate, Bill Cullimore, National Junior Platform champion.

He got off to an early lead and continued to add to it, averaging nearly 8 points per try. Cullimore, recovering from an early season injury, finished second, while third place in the event went to Tate, of Western.

The relays were closely contested, but in both instances third-man leads proved the margin of victory. In the 140-yard medley, Spangler, swimming at the anchor post, won the event for Massanutten by outswimming Hamm, of Western. Van Camp picked up the lead in the last event, the 186 2-3 relay, and Prew finished well in the lead to win.

50-yard free style—Souers, Mass.; Fleming, West.; McQueen, West. Time, 26.4.
100-yard breast stroke—Spangler, Mass.; Koch, Mass.; Cunlberti, West. Time 1:18.4.
220-yard free style—Nixon, Mass.; Hamm, Mass.; Madden, West. Time, 2:38.
100-yard back stroke—Kiefer, Mass.; Gray, West.; Boyd, West. Time, 1:8.2.
100-yard free style—Prew, Mass.; Lemly, West.; Jenkins, West. Time, 0:58.
Fancy diving (low board)—Van Camp, Mass.; Cullimore, Mass.; Tate, West.; point average 80.9.
140-yard medley relay—Massanutten, Kiefer, Koch, Spangler. Second, Western, Gray, Tansey, Hamm. Time, 1:22.

Jacobs Wins Over Jallos

Hopewell Lightweight Gets 10-Rd. Verdict.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 17.—Stumpy Jacobs, veteran Hopewell, Va., lightweight, returning to the ring after a lay-off of several months, hammered out a clean-cut 10-round decision over clever Lou Jallos, of Cleveland, in the main bout at the auditorium here tonight.

Jacobs opened up with a two-fisted attack in the first round that had Jallos in a bad way, but the Clevelander weathered the flurry and came back to shade Jallos in the second and third rounds. Jallos continued to box his way out of difficulty in the next two rounds, earning an even break in the fourth and carrying the fifth by a slight margin.

Jallos ran into trouble in the sixth and Jacobs came on to carry the round and then finished in whirlwind fashion to take four of the last five rounds with the ninth being scored even. Jallos had the tenth round well in hand until he ran into a right-hand punch that staggered him. Jacobs tried hard for a knockdown, but Jallos was too crafty and managed to last the round.

There were no knockdowns. Jacobs came in at 136 pounds with Jallos doing 136¼.

In the preliminaries Jake Denning, 165, Durham, N. C., defeated Red Lewis, 167½, Richmond (10).

Charley Sharp, 120¼, Newport News, decisioned Vince Carino, 122, Richmond (6).

Chief Cherokee, Wilson Cherokee Reservation, knocked out Roland Potter, 156, Newport News, in the third round (59 seconds).

Hall Qualifies.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 17.—Clarence Hall, of Washington, D. C., turned in a net score of 39 in the nine-hole qualifying round of the Old Guards golf tournament here today. He had a card of 48 and a handicap of 9 strokes. Match play over the nine-hole route will commence tomorrow in flights of eight and the finals are scheduled for Thursday.

'Clean Up Amateur Hockey!' New War Cry of Badge Wearers

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, for The Washington Post.

New York, Jan. 17.—A bitter battle rages over the "ugly duckling" that lays golden eggs.

The A. A. U. and alleged professional promoters are engaged now in one of the hottest fights in sports history for the control of amateur ice hockey, "ugly duckling" of simon pure athletics.

Frederick W. Rubien, chairman of the Amateur Athletic Union's hockey committee and secretary of the American Olympic committee, insists that the ice game be "cleaned up" pronto if the United States is to be represented by a hockey team in the 1940 Olympic games in Japan.

Rubien charges that "professional promoters have invaded this sport and so commercialized certain sections of it that it is a disgrace for their leagues and clubs to be operating under the banner of amateurism." Rubien declares that those "professional and semiprofessional outfits" must be restrained from advertising themselves as "amateurs," and that college and club teams desiring to retain their amateur standing must refrain from scheduling games with "pros."

Amateur hockey is a "duckling" because its popularity in Northern United States is as recent as it is amazing. The A. A. U. took over organization of the sport in 1931 in order to provide a team to represent the United States in the '32 games at Lake Placid.

You can get a fair idea of the duckling's egg-laying ability when you realize that a record crowd of 14,247 paying fans attended Sunday afternoon's game at Madison Square when the New York Rovers beat the Atlantic City Sea Gulls. There was nothing particular at stake in the game—just a tilt between two clubs of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League. The other three clubs in the league are the Hershey, Pa., Bears; the Baltimore Orioles—I understand that the fans swarm out in those cities also—the Bronx, N. Y., Tigers. Likewise in cities belonging to the Michigan-Ontario circuit. The promoters realize that there's plenty of gold in the duckling's eggs.

Rubien emphasizes another "commercializing" angle to these big-time hockey circuits. He says the promoters of professional hockey have come to realize their value as "farm clubs" for producing performers who may graduate later to clubs in the National Professional Hockey League. He says three of the New York Rangers stellar play-

Al Mancine, Ingram Win Halted Bouts

Morton Defeats Tucker, Hoover Gets Verdict Over Marino.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The Cinderella-like ring career of Lou Gevinson swung upward again last night at Turner's Arena where he punched out a close 10-round decision over Armanda Sicilia, of Chicago.

Eighteen hundred fans, largest turout of the indoor season, saw the swarthy southpaw uncork a potent right hook to whip his more experienced opponent. A wholly unexpected right to the jaw in the seventh round, it was, that floored Sicilia for no count and swung the tide of battle in Gevinson's favor.

Until Sicilia's protruding and unprotected jaw collided with that blow he was slightly out in front of the local lightweight on points. On The Post's score sheet Lou won four rounds, Sicilia three, and the rest were even. It was a split verdict. Referee Charley Reynolds and Judge Bob Eller cast their ballots for Gevinson. Judge Frank Schuyler voted for Sicilia, and a vociferous minority agreed with him.

Lou Beaten to Punch.

Gevinson's inability to fathom Sicilia's bull-like charges in the earlier rounds cost him innumerable points. The Chicago clouter beat Lou to the punch with a looping right to the body, burying it almost up to the elbow. He followed the blow in, locking Gevinson's dangerous left in a clinch, then bounced away unharmed. He shook Lou to his heels with a right to the head in the first round, causing a slight swelling under the eye.

This, however, was the only visible damage to the District lad's anatomy. More effective were Sicilia's punishing body blows, but Lou never flinched in the face of his fire. Gevinson carried the fight to his opponent from the first bell to the last, only he was doing much better when the latter tinkled.

Gevinson took command of the festivities as the sixth round opened. While Sicilia held him on even terms in the seventh and eight, he showed vast improvement over his earlier form. Armanda's right, which had been beating Lou's left to the draw, began to lag a bit, and it was evident that he neither liked Gevison's continued pummelling, nor was able to stand too much of it.

Ray Ingram Wins.

Ray Ingram, also trudging up the comeback trail, strengthened his claim to a match with Gevinson by winning over Sailor Born, of Norfolk, on a technical knockout. The bout was stopped after 2:55 of the sixth round.

Ingram concentrated his attack on the body, flailing the tar with hooks from both hands to the mid-section. Born's lone weapon appeared to be a potent right, which landed exactly three times and shook Ingram on each occasion. Born, however, was unable to follow up his advantage. A bad cut over Born's eye was responsible for the bout's sudden end.

Al Mancine was awarded a technical knockout over Pete Powell when Referee Charley Reynolds stopped the match after 2:42 of the third round. It was the third technical knockout of the night.

Morton Beats Tucker.

Mike Morton took the second preliminary, staggering "Red" Tucker wiht a barrage of rights to the head in the third and fourth rounds to win a unanimous decision. Tucker was out on his feet at the finish.

Tommy Hoover opened the evening's festivities with a technical knockout victory over Battling Marino (nee Maggio). Referee Ray Bowen mercifully saved Marino, who bled profusely from a cut eye and nose, from further damage when he stopped it after 2:12 of the third round.

Pack Kayoes Godwin.

Al Jamison Going South to Compete In Pro Tourneys

Al Jamison, assistant to Wiffy Cox at Kenwood, will make his first trip South this week, leaving with Dr. Parks, Kenwood member, for several weeks' golfing. They will join Cox at Coral Gables.

Jamison will play in the New Orleans Open and several other pro events, returning to the club in March. Raymond Willett, member of the Kenwood staff, returned yesterday from a month's vacation and will be acting professional in Jamison's absence.

Although serving on the staff at two other clubs in previous years, Bannockburn and Army and Navy, Jamison has never had the opportunity to play tournament golf. His major victory the past season was at Cumberland, where he paired with Buddy Tew to win the invitational 36-hole proamateur with a subpar score. He recently scored successive 69 and 67s at Kenwood.

Group Plans A $300,000 Sport Arena

Hockey.

will seat 6,000 spectators for ice hockey, 8,500 for basketball and tennis, 10,000 for boxing and conventions. Thirty-five thousand square feet of floor space would be available for conventions and exhibits.

Listed as directors of the corporation in addition to the three officers are Cornelius H. Doherty, prominent Washington attorney and Thomas R. Cowhert, affiliated with the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Mr. Doherty, attorney for the group, announced yesterday that only $225,000 in stock would be sold. "Virtually all of the stock will be taken by the directors and their friends," said Mr. Doherty. There will be no stock-selling campaign. The financial backing of the enterprise is already assured.

"Associated with us are a group of businessmen and sportsmen who have long felt that one of the city's great needs has been a sports auditorium. We hope thus to elevate Washington to the stature of a major sports city. We envision attractive college basketball doubleheaders that will draw crowds upward of 8,000 and our ice plant would be available for league games as well as public skating."

Highly significant is the presence of M. J. Uline as president of the enterprise. Mr. Uline, whose ice company adjoins the proposed site of the auditorium, is believed prepared to provide the necessary refrigeration for the indoor hockey rink. Estimates are that a refrigeration plant will entail a cost of $75,000.

Capital Garden, Inc., plans within the next month to complete negotiations for the purchase of the Second and M street plot from Wilbur F. Nash at a cost of $60,000. The Garden will pay $1.25 per square foot for the 48,000 square feet of ground, according to the statement filed with the commission.

Affiliated with the officers and directors of the group are a trio listed as "promoters," as required by the S. E. C. registration form. They are Fred Mesmer, Georgetown University coach, who is associated with the law firm of Mr. Doherty; Stanley J. Wilson, a civil engineer, and Frank Newton.

The group has stated that $50 will be the par value of 6,000 shares of 6 per cent preferred stock. Twelve thousand shares of common stock at no par value will be listed.

Securities Exchange Commission officials announced yesterday that action on the statement for registration would be taken within 20 days.

George Washington Plans Not Affected.

The sports arena of Capital Gardens, Inc., coming on the heels of rumored plans of George Washington's field house, will not affect the latter's building program.

Tentative plans for the Colinial's arena call for classrooms to furnish the entire student body of 7,000, in addition to its basketball and ice facilities. The only way the new plant may affect the university's is that the latter may not include the refrigeration plant, now that it has competition.

Badgers Beat Wolverines

Hand Michigan 39 to 30 Beating at Home.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 17.—Wisconsin humbled Michigan's Big Ten Conference basketball team tonight by a score of 39 to 30.

The defeat was the first Michigan has suffered in four games. Wisconsin took the lead at the start and held it to the end, piling up a 21-to-14 advantage at half time.

Capt. John Townsend, the Wolverine high-scoring forward, was held to one field goal and two free throws, relinquishing the game-scoring honors for his team to Thomas, forward, who made seven points.

Pastor, Everett Sign To Meet Here Jan. 31

Arrangements to bring a heavyweight with a first-ten ranking into Washington for the first time were completed yesterday when Promoter Joe Turner announced that he had signed Bob Pastor to fight here January 31.

Sporting the Nation's seventh ranking position in the lists of the big men, Pastor will headline the weekly fight show against Buck Everett, claimant to the local heavyweight crown.

The signed contracts of both men were filed with the boxing commission yesterday after more than a week of dickering with Jimmy Johnston, manager of the New York heavyweight.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who closed the match said that Johnston had at first refused to send the man who lasted ten rounds with Champion Joe Louis to Washington but finally consented when changes were made in the contract.

He will meet Everett in a ten-round feature.

Everett, on the comeback trail, upset the dope by scoring a quick two-round knockout over Murray Kanner in his last appearance here. It was his first bout in more than six months. He has been living in the North Carolina mountains, reconditioning.

His manager, Jim Erwin, said he accepted the bout in the hope that the stock of the former Chicago Golden Gloves Champion might be enhanced in big measure. A victory would put Everett in line for a bout with any heavyweight in the country.

In Pastor's last appearance, he bowed to Nathan Mann; ranked No. 4 by the National Boxing Association, but holds a recent victory over Bob Nestell, the Californian.

Bob Pastor Wins Over Hans Haverlick.

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Bob Pastor, 185, of New York City, won by a technical knockout over Hans Haverlick, of Austria, when the heavyweight bout was stopped in the eighth because of a bad cut over Haverlick's eye.

The battle was the first for Pastor since he was defeated two months ago by Nathan Mann, of New Haven, in New York City, and marked the first step in his campaign to regain his ranking among the first five boxers.

Falco Is Suspended For Attempted Run-Out.

The District Boxing Commission yesterday suspended Tony Falco, Philadelphia welterweight, for six months and requested the National Boxing Association to co-operate in making the ban effective in 37 States.

Falco's refusal to box Andre Jessurun at the Rialto Theater Friday night unless Promoter Howard Livingston gave him $200 precipitated the investigation and subsequent suspension. Falco's original contract called for 15 per cent of the gross receipts, less Federal taxes and transportation to and from Philadelphia.

When Falco and his handlers saw the slim crowd of only 308 spectators in the theater Falco refused to go into the ring on a percentage of such a small house.

Jessurun won the match.

70 pounds—Donald King, Georgetown, defeated John Davis, by technical knockout in third round.

This Morning

D. C. Fast Becoming Hot Sports Center.

By Shirley Povich.

There is evidence that Washington, after all these years, is shedding its label as a hick sports town and moving into the big leagues. In case you had been thinking all the time that Washington was a red-hot sports center, don't forget that: Before George Marshall moved his pennant-winning Redskins into our town the only claim Washington had as a major league port of call was the Washington Baseball Club. Its football was a brand of the college type that rarely excited as many as 10,000 fans to pay their way into the game; its basketball teams could never hope to play to more than 3,000 spectators; Washington fans could only read about the big track meets, and ice hockey—well, there just wasn't any ice. The town is without horse racing and its boxing is something less than big league.

POVICH.

Clark Griffith, during the 26 years he has been with the Nats, has done nobly by Washington fans. Despite the general belief that Washington has not been a consistent threat in the pennant races, the Nats' record for the last 26 years is eloquent in its rebuttal. Over that period, only the New York Yankees have averaged a higher finish than Washington in the American League.

But until the baseball season opened in mid-April, and after it closed in the first week in October, Washington was absolutely bereft of any particular importance in the national sports scene.

Last fall, the Redskins came along. Sports interest here sprouted and flourished as the Redskins came up with sensation after sensation and climbed to the top of the National Football League. In a town where there had been no big league football, the champions of the realm now made their home.

Yesterday, a group incorporated as the Capital Garden, undertook a $300,000 project designed to give Washington a sports center seating 8,500 for basketball and indoor tennis, 10,000 for boxing and 6,000 for ice hockey—yes, ice hockey. Washington is growing up.

A capacity of 8,500 for basketball means that Washington can be the host for those exciting college basketball double-headers which have swept New York into a frenzy of excitement. Washington could be in that college circuit which brings to the East the outstanding basketball teams of the Midwest who have been filling Madison Square Garden's 18,000 seats to capacity.

There is no evidence that Washington would immediately be taken into the major hockey league, but a franchise for the Capital in the Eastern League is a distinct possibility. Baltimore's franchise in the same league is supported largely by Washington ice fans who are willing to make the 80-mile trek into Maryland each week to watch the sport denied them here.

Washington tennis players all these years have been forced to hibernate after the summer season for the lack of an indoor court, but the projected Garden auditorium which would be available for indoor tennis would seat 8,500 fans whose attendance would guarantee the city a place on the professional tennis circuit.

And, with a capacity of 10,000 for boxing, there might even be some fights scheduled which would be downright attractive. Washington's fight promoters, who have the lease of Griffith Stadium during the outdoor season, cannot compete with other outdoor fight sites in the East, but with a 10,000 winter capacity they could go far afield to bring some significant matches to the Capital.

If questioned closely, Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn make no bones about the fact that they operate their present indoor arena purely to develop talent for their outdoor shows. A capacity of only 2,000 such as Turner's Arena, almost forbids the matching of top-rank fighters. Washington, throughout the winter, must be content with cheap fistic productions. A $2,000 gate at Turner's Arena is almost tops.

Washington is languishing as a fight town for the lack of a suitable indoor arena. That there is fight interest in the Capital is evident from the fact that Turner and Ahearn operate weekly without fail, while large fight centers, such as Pittsburgh, are often forced to suspend operations.

The promoter who owns the boxing rights to a Washington arena seating 10,000, who has the courage to gamble on attractive purses, could give Washington big league fights, capture that Washington fight interest and finish his fiscal year with a tidy sum in hand.

Y. M. C. A. Sports.

The seventh round of the Government-Y Basketball League will swing into action tonight on the Y. M. C. A. court, with the fast-traveling PWA quint still out in front, with seven victories in as many starts. State Department holds the runner-up spot, with six wins and one defeat.

Schedule for tonight:

Bureau of Standards vs. State Department, 7:10; Internal Revenue vs. G. A. O. (P. O. division), 8:20; A. G. O. (War Department) vs. Veterans' Administration, 9:30.

Alexandrine Beaten Out In Late Duel

Proph Pays $6.70; Palamede Brings Backers $8.40 Ticket.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 17. The first full week of racing at the Miami Jockey Club's picturesque plant got under way with another big crowd in attendance. The program was topped by the Naples Claiming Handicap, which was split and run in two divisions as the fourth and fifth events. The first half went to J. W. Parrish's Proph in one of the closest finishes of the meeting. The Kentucky-owned colt lasted on the rail to beat the Medway Stable's Alexandrine in a photo duel. Mrs. F. M. Grabner's Spanish Babe was third, 4 lengths away.

Cosgrave Stable's Danarco, favorite and winner of his last three outings at Tropical Park, never could get up. He beat only one horse in the field of seven. Proph's backers collected $6.70 for two. He ran the one mile in 1:38 1-5, under Nick Wall.

It was strictly a two-horse affair all the way. Proph shot past Alexandrine after a quarter mile and opened up daylight, but Alexandrine rallied to Freddy Scheih's call in the stretch and seemed ready to run over Proph as they entered the last sixteenth. Wall rode one of his best finishes and Proph gamely stuck it out. Spanish Babe came from last place to nip Buck Langhorne at the wire.

Palamede Pays $8.40.

Palamede, in the red, white and blue livery of Mrs. Kirby Ramsey, showed the smartest exhibition of the day in winning the second division of the Naples. The 7-year-old son of Ladkin, well handled by Sterling Young, ran a mile in 1:37 flat and clicked by a length and a half to pay $8.40. T. F. Sword's Bootmaker was second, a half length before Mrs. E. I. Wade's Up and Up. Headin' Home, the fifth straight losing choice, made the running into the stretch, then faltered and lost the show by a half length.

Young was patient with Palamede. His mount raced in fifth position but well enough placed behind the early leaders to be within range. Sweeping around the field at the last turn, The Ramsey runner overtook Headin' Home when straightened out and easily drew clear of the field. Bootmaker, always well up, held tenaciously to the runner-up position in the last furlong duel with Up and Up.

Once again it was demonstrated in today's first event that the progeny of Wise Counsellor campaign with considerable success in Florida's baby races. Odessa Beulah, a newcomer grouped in the "field," outran a big field of maiden fillies and scored by a length and a half. The chestnut lassie stepped into early command and gradually drew away, finishing the three furlongs in :34 2-5 to return $8.50. Sweet Patrice, favorite on the strength of being second in her recent debut, finished in that spot again after being messed up a bit at the break. Modest Queen was third, three lengths behind.

Highomar Wins.

Highomar, close second choice to Miss Webb, was an easy winner over the $1,250 platers in the 6-furlong second contest. The five pounds apprentice allowance was waived on the gelding and Paul Ryan, a Chicago lad who was America's third leading rider last year, did a neat job in the saddle. He gradually improved his mount's position and swept past the long-priced Arthur B. in the last furlong to win by three lengths, paying $8.50. Arthur B. beat the slow-starting Miss Webb by a length and a half for the place.

Black River, a close second to Terpsichore at Tropical Park, picked up considerable weight and dashed home an easy four lengths winner of the third race. Escohigh, the early pacemaker, saved second money by a length from Maecloud. Terpsichore, in a contending position early, wound up beating one horse. Black River, never worse than second in running, gained command in the stretch and moved far clear to pay $24.10.

Onalark Beaten.

Walter Morton, which faltered in the stretch run of a recent six furlong event, drove to a one length score over the mile distance of the sixth race. Kept close off the early leaders by Apprentice Harvey Keppler, the $11.60 for Two Hazard spurted into a clear lead in the stretch and held on to stave off Onalark, the sixth choice in a row to fall by the wayside. Monument was a fast closing third, a head behind.

Bisons Defeat St. Paul Five

Howard University cagers won their sixth victory in seven starts last night in the Howard gym, trouncing the St. Paul quintet, 59 to 26. It was their fourth conference victory.

The locals led 28 to 16 at half time and outscored the visitors, 31 to 10, in the last half, with Wynne and Jackson in high-scoring roles. The St. Paul team scored but six times from the floor, counting 14 points from the foul line.

Bate and Edmonds with 9 and 7 points, led the losers while Wynne, with 12 points, took game honors.

The Brown Bombers defeated the Howard Jayvees, 22 to 16, in a preliminary.

Howard will seek its seventh victory tomorrow night, entertaining the Greensboro A. and G. five.

Time Out! BY CHET SMITH

One prescription every one can read and understand: "Today's Health Talk," by Dr. Logan Clendening, on the Woman's Page.

At The Post...

Dear Al. Selections at Hialeah Park.

Chalk up another good move for Hialeah. The front row in the north end of the grandstand is now reserved for the exclusive use of trainers. Conditioners sending horses to the post are entitled to watch that particular race from the special section. This was a welcome move to horsemen for heretofore a trainer was hard pressed to find a position to view the race after tending to the details of saddling. At most of the Northern tracks the horsemen have to go to the infield. Two Washington boys arrived today. They are former Jockey J. J. Doonis and Jockey C. C. McTague. The former will make riding engagements for the latter. Jockey Carl Hanford is ready to resume his riding career. He has taken a needed rest and has reported at the track. Selby and Preston Burch, the Washington trainers, are taking in the sport here. Preston reports that Jacobs, the good filly, has had her ankles fired. Arizona has joined the States which have major race tracks. It has a $2,000,000 plant at Phoenix. Racing will be held three times a week. Havana has gotten several carloads of horses from Florida. The Cuban officials were mighty pleased to get them because they had been forced to run some horses almost every day. Greg Johnson and Palmer Heagerty, Baltimore turfwriters, were injured in an auto crash at Orangeburgh, S. C., while they were en route to Florida. Both will be confined there some time and would appreciate letters from friends.

BILL.

First race—Our Mat is said to be a good juvenile and one that will not be long out of the winner's circle. He has worked well and I'm going to string along. Rippler and Beau Do for the place and show awards.

Second race—Four Spot may be a surprise in this field. He should go well at this seven furlongs and with Arcaro to do the hustling I see no reason for mistakes. Buttermilk has improved and may crowd Noble Boy into third money.

Third race—Singing Slave did not appear to want much last out and may be more serious this time. Gets a strong rider in Longden and has the necessary foot. Miss Oak gets in with feather weight and should be prominent. Book Reader for the show.

Fourth race—Feng marches postward with only 98 pounds up and Mora to do the booting. I'm going to get down on this one. Jon-Jon was second last out after being a coast-to-coast tip. Blini may make a money appearance.

Fifth race—Paradisical is at the top of her form and seems capable of holding a field of her own sex in check. Millie M. and Tabitha have good races in the book and should not be far out of it.

Sixth race—Bess B. might be the right one in this rare open race. She has gone well in trials and is in smart hands. Westy's Hero and Pelter to account for the place and show awards.

Seventh race—Building Trades is a tough track horse and should give a good performance on the turf course. The light assignment helps. Eddie H. has proven a surprise horse and is dangerous. El Puma probably will get in the pay-off.

Eighth race—Touche likes this long route and will have the alert Mora to do the riding. Miss Capers, a recent winner, is wel placed and a recent winner, is wel placed and sible surprise.

Best bet—Paradisical.

ARTHUR B. prominent throughout, saved ground and drew out entering the stretch, but was not equal to the winner when challenged. MISS WEBB broke slowly. BLACK RIVER, going forwardly under light restraint until straightened into the stretch, drew out at his leisure the final furlong to win in hand. ESCOHIGH broke alertly and moved to the front with a rush. He saved ground rounding the turn, but was unable to keep stride with the winner when challenged. MAECLOUD, off slowly, improved her position gradually while circling the field the last half mile and wore TRICKWICK down in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. The Naples Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:35½. PROPH, displaying improved form, followed the pace under restraint until straightened into the stretch. He assumed command approaching the half pole, withstood repeated challenges from ALEXANDRINE the final quarter mile to gain a close decision. ALEXANDRINE outbroke the field. She was eased off the pace midway down the backstretch and followed the pace closely. She responded courageously when placed to a drive and just failed to get up. SPANISH BABE, off slowly, closed a big gap while improving her position on the extreme outside.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. The Naples Handicap (second division). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. BOOTMAKER, broke alertly, followed the pace well up until straightened into the stretch, responded gamely to punishment and outlasted UP AND UP. The latter steadied behind the leaders, saved ground entering the stretch, closed gamely, but was in tight quarters at the finish.

WALTER MORTON, away forwardly, was taken back of the pace entering the backstretch and followed the leaders under restraint until straightened out into the stretch. He moved up gamely between the leaders when called upon, took command, but was doing his best at the end. ONALARK, on the outside and in the thick of contention all the way, made a game effort, but could not get up. MONUMENT battered his position steadily on the outside the last 3 furlongs and wore WHOOPER down through the stretch.

Interhigh Twin Bill Is Set for Today

Eastern Five Is Favored To Take Lead

Battles Tech; Roosevelt Faces Central at Tech Gym.

By Jack Munhall.

Eastern's crack five is expected to take undisputed lead of the interhigh basketball race this afternoon when it meets Tech in the second game of a double-header at Tech gym.

In the opener, Central and Roosevelt fives struggle to see which will register its first series victory. However, since the result of the game will not noticeably change the complexion of the race, all eyes will turn to Tech and Eastern.

Eastern, driving fast after a preseries loss, has impressively knocked off Wilson and Roosevelt and is now tied with Western for the lead, each having two victories and no losses. Tech holds third place with a pair of successes and one failure.

A defeat for the McKinleymen will, as has been generally predicted, throw the series into a two-team race between Eastern and Western, which meet Friday in the game that promises to settle the championship.

Although Eastern is an odd-on favorite to dispose of Tech, Coach Bruce Kessler, of the T street quintet, feels he may have a surprise ready for the haughty Lincoln Park team. One reason for his optimism is the return to action of Merrill Heddings, 6-foot-5-inch center and leading scorer. Heddings, a Seventh Day Adventist, did not play against Western last week when the Georgetowners handed Tech its first setback.

But even with the lanky pivotman set to once again drop the ball in the basket, Eastern's veteran five appears to be entirely too powerful.

The Boydmen, sparked by Lee Lusby and Russ Lombardy, have suddenly started to play the kind of basketball of which they are capable and looked very good in routing Roosevelt and Wilson. They now are working smoothly and efficiently.

Tech, too, has improved over earlier efforts. Charley Kendall and Leroy Curtis and Vince De Leon have formed an effective trio and with more experience should be even better. However, at this time Tech definitely is not in Eastern's class and only the point margin of difference is questionable.

Central will depend on Leonard Sokol, its gangling forward who has a penchant for circus shots, Archie Panago, fine guard and floor man and John Fanning, its experienced center, to lead it to victory.

St. John's Prep Five Meets Western.

The powerful St. John's prep five exposes its perfect scholastic basketball record to the Western quintet at 3:30 today in the Cadet gym.

Western, the defending interhigh champion, is rapidly improving and is expected to give Ge ne Augusterfer's crew its warmest tussle of the season. St. John's, with victories over Tech, Mount St. John's, of Baltimore, the alumni and Calvert Hall, is on the way to its best season in years. Only the strong Georgetown frosh have been able to defeat the Cadets.

St. John's will start Jim Swagart and Bap Battiest at forwards; Jim Giebel at center and Jim Mulvigill and Joe Gallegher at guards.

Bethesda Quintet Meets Wash.-Lee.

Bethesda Chevy-Chase tonight meets Washington-Lee in a basketball game at Bethesda, Md. The tapoff is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

ers not so long ago did their bladework in the Eastern amateur circuit.

The greatest evil connected with this commercializing of the amateur sport, according to Rubien, has been the constant importation of young players from Canada. To satisfy immigration requirements, these youngsters are assured "jobs" before coming to the United States. "And quite often such jobs are nonexistent, but the players make a very good living on "expense money" from the clubs.

This importation of Canadian players not only commercialized the sport but it prevented the proper development of young American skaters. Now the A. A. U. insists that the importation cease, and that only United States hockey players be eligible for registration with the A. A. U. No player is eligible for the Olympic team unless registered.

Last year the A. A. U. suspended all clubs and players in the Eastern Amateur League. Because of this suspension and the recently increased campaign against importing and subsidizing, the Eastern League is heading a movement to take the control of amateur hockey away from the A. A. U. "But that will never happen," assures Rubien, "because all of the genuine amateur clubs and all the colleges appreciate what we are trying to do—and what would happen if the promoters got control."

Rubien blamed the Madison Square Garden Corporation more than any other organization for this alleged commercialization. He said he and his A. A. U. associates introduced the amateur game at the Garden a half dozen years ago. But when the game became popular and made money, the Garden "virtually froze us out." Promoters in other cities have done likewise, he said.

The American Olympic Association refused to appoint a hockey committee while in session two weeks ago. And Rubien says none will be appointed until the sport is "cleaned up," even if it means sending no team to Japan. And it will not be "cleaned up," he concluded, until "the professionals are forced to cease masquerading as amateurs."

Hoyas Drill On Offense Against G. W.

Colonials Tighten Up Defense—Both Work for Big Game.

George Washington and Georgetown University basketball teams prepared yesterday for vital games with leading foes this week.

A two-hour session behind closed doors in the Colonials' G street gym enabled Coaches Bill Reinhart and Freddy Mesmer to see their charges in action against competition of a variety they oppose later this week.

For the Colonials it was a last preparation for their game with Long Island tomorrow in New York, while the Hoyas were filing an edge for their double trouble with Pittsburgh and Penn State Friday and Saturday, respectively.

Reinhart drilled his undefeated Colonials on defense in anticipation of fast passing of the Blackbirds. Although the Colonials defeated Minnesota, the club which holds the win over Long Island, he refuses to believe in the consistency of past performances.

The Colonials are anxious to atone for two trimmings by Long Island last season, one in the Garden and one in Washington, the last by a four-point margin.

Georgetown, now tied with Penn State for the lead in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, worked on the offensive most of the time, trying to penetrate G. W.'s zone defense. Both coaches used many substitutes and expressed satisfaction with their teams' work.

Because the Colonials will play the Blackbirds in the college gym, a long, narrow floor, Reinhart plans to switch from his semizone defense to the absolute. Yesterday, he had his boys trying to break up the fast passing attack of the Georgetown team and defend against their corner shots.

The Hoyas, the little time they were on defensive, worked from a zone-defense which afforded the Colonials plenty of practice on long range shooting and quick passing.

Victories over Pittsburgh and Penn State would put the Hoyas in a fine spot to win the conference title and would give them their third win in circuit play.

They have bowed only to New York University in the Garden and hold victories over Temple, Maryland and Western Maryland.

George Washington has defeated Tennessee, Baltimore University, Minnesota, Ohio State and Elon.

Greenbrier Breaks With Tennis Body

Resort Club Again Will Stage Annual Open Net Tournament.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Jan. 17.—The Greenbrier Club of this fashionable resort broke today with the United States Lawn Tennis Association in a controversy over the Nation's first "open" tennis tournament.

Leaders of the club announced their intention of holding the second annual competition for amateurs and professionals despite the association's action in barring six amateurs who played in the first event last summer.

R. B. Parker, of the club, said: "As far as we're concerned, we're out of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and we have already scheduled the second annual United States Open tournament for $2,000 in prizes on April 25.

"Our official poll of clubs last fall showed overwhelming favor of amateur-pro competition.

"If the U. S. L. T. A. continues to ignore popular feeling and sentiment among United States clubs and individuals on the open question, its membership in the international federation is empty and meaningless. Under such circumstances the handful of United States tennis overlords might as well represent Eskimos."

The six amateurs barred from further U. S. L. T. A. competition by the association at a meeting in Miami, Fla., were:

Parker and Byrne Bauer, both of White Sulphur Springs; Robert A. Papps, of Milwaukee; Hugh Miller, of Charleston, W. Va.; Gordon Riath, of Waterbury, Conn., and Merlynn P. Stevens, of Milwaukee. None advanced far in the tourney, won by Karl Kozeluh, a professional of Greenwich, Conn.

Parker said that failure of amateurs to participate "won't have anything to do with the tournament." He continued:

"They're welcome to take part if they care to. As far as the disbarred amateurs are concerned, there are hundreds of tournaments held annually without U. S. L. T. A. sanction. They won't spoil for lack of competition."

DiMaggio in New York.

New York, Jan. 17.—Joe DiMaggio, sensational young outfielder of the New York Yankees, arrived here today and said he expected to confer with owner Jacob Ruppert before he returns to his San Francisco home, February 1.

Astor Clarke to Meet Pacini; Misses Gulli, Simmons to Bowl.

Singles matches between Astor Clarke and Ollie Pacini, at five games, and Lorraine Gulli and Ida Simmons, at five games, will feature the all-star duckpin program at Convention Hall next Sunday night for the President's paralysis fund.

The leading bowlers of the Middle Atlantic sector will roll on the four-hour program, with singles, doubles and mixed doubles scheduled. Admission will be 35 cents, or 75 cents for reserved seats.

Clarke, the Nation's No. 1 duckpinner and recent winner of the United States Sweepstakes, will be facing one of the city's most prominent bowlers of the season in Pacini, who scored victories in the Dixie and Von Dreele sweepstakes.

Ida Simmons, the Nation's No. 1 woman bowler, from Norfolk, Va., winner of the Dixie Sweeps event here Saturday, will face Miss Gulli in the semifinal attraction of the night. Miss Simmons' four sweepstakes victories this year show she is still very much on her game, although Miss Gulli, No. 2 bowler and former holder of the top-ranking position, should make it practically an even match. Other events on the charity card will be announced later.

War Department maintained its first-place post in the Men's Federal League at Arcadia last night, sweeping a three-game set with G. P. O. The team rolled high set for the night with 1,753.

Senate climbed into second place by winning three games from Adjustment Service Bonds, while G. A. O. went into third place by losing the odd one to I. B. E. W. National Capital Parks formed a three-way tie for fourth by winning all three from Veterans Administration while Coast Guard dropped the odd one to F. B. I.

Oscar Lee, of Coast Guard, rolled high game with 150, with Frank Gartside, of National Capital Parks, taking high set honors with 395. Coast Guard won high team game with 628.

George Jones, of the Old Timers, rolled a 143 game and 375 set last night in the Old Timers League at Lucky Strike to pace his team to a 3-0 win over Sales and enable them to cling to first place. George James and Perry Nutwell tied for individual high set with 379.

In the Procurement League at Lucky Strike, Harry Vignau rolled high set of 376. Moors won all three from Aztecs and tied for first with the Tudors, who lost the odd game to the Georgians. The Ionics also won a 2-1 decision over Romans.

Miami Draws Scoring Star

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 17.—Melvin (Chick) Harbert, who startled the golfing world last July with his scoring feats in the Michigan Open, will make his Florida debut in the sixth annual Miami-Biltmore Amateur tournament beginning tomorrow.

Harbert shot consecutive rounds of 63, 64, 67 and 74 for a 72-hole card of 268 in winning the Michigan Open at Jackson. He is visiting at Sarasota.

Harbert is due to get stiff competition from Charles Mayo, jr., of New York, who won the midwinter amateur tournament here last week, and J. B. Ryerson, of Cooperstown, N. Y., who won a tournament at Palm Beach at the same time.

The runners-up in both those events, John Cummings, the Memphis baseball player, and Harold Kaplow, of East Orange, N. J., respectively, also will try again.

Leon Pettigrew, of Pendleton, Ind., last year's winner, has turned professional and will not defend. Another former winner will be on deck, however, in Charles Whitehead, of South River, N. J.

Gus Novotny, of Chicago, has been turning in the best practice scores, shooting around par 71 for the past week. Other entries include Dr. L. J. Barnette, the Coral Gables minister who was runner-up to Petrigrew last year; Earl Christiansen, Miami's golfing policeman, and Arnold Minkley and W. M. Ritter, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Miami Four-Ball Tournament Is Changed to an Open Event

The Miami four-ball championship, held each spring, has been changed to an open event instead of invitational affair for 32 of the outstanding players . . . The news was well received by the 100 or more professionals who make their winter home in Miami and have been unable to play in the event . . . The change was made possible by the added $3,000 to the purse by the city that gave the city manager say-so as to how it would be run . . . The players will select their own partners . . . New York is seeking the 1939 national open as an added attraction for the World's Fair . . . And a hole-in-one contest may be run for the duration of the fair, at the suggestion of Joe Williams, World-Telegram sports writer . . . Oakmont is undergoing several changes for the national amateur, scheduled there next summer . . . Its championship qualities will be strengthened, although mounds and drops and several of the bunkers, that affect mostly the high handicap players, will be removed . . . The changes will make the course more modern and present a better defense for the present low scoring.

• • • •

Sammy Snead, whose victory in the Bing Crosby event was his third on the winter tour, the others Miami Open and Nassau, is the newest candidate for the best dressed pro golfer . . . Sammy was second to Craig Wood for the $500 prize in the last open . . . Municipal golfers in Birmingham, Indianapolis, St. Paul, Louisville and Atlanta are being organized into clubs for the purpose of advising authorities on construction work for public golf . . . The plan would result in the promotion of more competitions, social events and establish the clubs as community recreation centers . . . Dave Mitchell, national champion in 1934 is now a resident of Atlanta where he is organizing the linksmen . . . White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., home of Sammy Snead announces a new event, the Greenbrier Open, to be played November 8, 9 and 10 . . . Future fields for the British Open will be limited to the low 40 players for the third and fourth rounds . . . the reduction of fields in the late rounds is also being considered here.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Bringing Home Low Trumps.

Errors at the bridge table pass through a curious cycle. Put an out-and-out beginner into a trump contract and he is apt to ruin his chances by deliberately shortening his own trump suit through needless ruffing. When he is ready to leave the novice class he has learned the great lesson of trump conservation. The difficulty now is that he will carry this conservation idea too far. Take a hand like the one shown below. It is my opinion that precisely two classes of players would fulfill the final contract—beginners and experts. The in-between players would probably fail dismally.

Building Total Holds Well Up To Last Year

$462,000,000 for First Quarter Is $9,000,000 Under Year Ago.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Despite dire forebodings, building volume in the first quarter of this year will only be about $9,000,000 under the same period last year, according to statistics compiled by the editors of Building.

Spent for all building in the first quarter of 1937, according to the editors of Building, was $471,000,000. Forecast to be spent in the first quarter of this year is $462,000,000.

Best gains in building volume in 1937 were, of course, made after the first quarter, but with economists and others foreseeing a likely pick-up in general business during the second quarter, and an accelerated pick-up during the second half, the editors of Building see no reason why building volume will not follow the general trend and do about as well in 1938 as in 1937.

Significant among the statistics published about the industry in the January issue of Building, is the fact that almost $221,000,000 was spent for building in the United States in December, a decline of about $14,000,000 from November.

Of the $221,000,000 spent for building in December, more than $57,000,000 was accounted for by rural building and almost $36,000,000 by alterations and repairs, which leaves urban building accounting for about $127,500,000 of the total.

Emphasized is the fact that labor rates in the industry are unlikely to change in the first quarter; that about $147,000,000 worth of utility construction is soon to be started by PWA; that about 35 per cent of A. F. of L. workers in the building trades are unemployed; that slum housing under the United States housing administration is making slow progress, and the generally good earnings made by manufacturers of building materials in 1937.

Business Loans Drop for Week

By the Associated Press.

Banks bought both Government and other securities in the week ended January 12, the Federal Reserve Board said yesterday.

Institutions in 101 leading cities reported that they added $41,000,000 worth of Federal obligations, $6,000,000 of Federally-guaranteed securities and $68,000,000 worth of other securities. This increase in investments was a factor in a $244,000,000 increase in demand deposits in these banks. A continued post-Christmas flow of shipping money back to the banks also influenced the change in deposit totals.

Loans for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes continued to decline, dropping $16,000,000 during the week. Unofficial sources attributed part of the steady liquidation of these busines loans to the effort of businessmen to reduce inventories.

Wheat Prices Slump After 1¼-Cent Rise

Liquidating Sales Held Responsible for Late Drop in Values.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—After a brief display of strength, turning reac-

Liquidating sales on the part holders of wheat futures here were largely responsible for the late setback of values. Dearth of any important European purchases of North American wheat was an adverse factor, and so, too, was lack of follow-up speculative buying when prices bulged.

Persistent absence of moisture relief for excessively dry conditions in domestic winter crop areas Southwest, together with abnormal springlike temperatures prevailing and a transient renewal of dust storms, did much to stimulate early advances of the wheat market here.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅝ higher, compared with Saturday's finish, May, 97¼@97⅜; July, 91½@91⅝; corn, unchanged to ¼ lower; May, 60½@60¼; July, 60¾@60⅞; oats, ¼-⅜ up; rye, showing ¼-¾ decline, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents advance.

Weakness of Utility Shares Causes General Market to Drop

Some Aircraft and Specialty Stocks Are Firm But Profit-Taking Is Rule of the Day; U. S. Bonds Advance.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 17.—Selling of utilities touched off a general decline in today's stock market and leaders yielded 1 to more than 2 points. A few aircrafts and specialties were resistant, but most of these lost heart before the close.

Transfers totaled 933,680 shares, compared with 845,900 last Friday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down .9 of a point at 47, exactly cancelling Saturday's advance.

News on the whole was no worse than last week, when the market put on a substantial recovery. But items that ordinarily would have been viewed as constructive were virtually ignored and profit realizing was the rule.

The list did fairly well at the opening. A backslide got under way shortly thereafter and rallying attempts generally were futile. Extreme losses, however, were shaded just before the close as short covering appeared.

Utilities tumbled following the proposal of President Wendell L. Willkie, of Commonwealth & Southern, that the Government purchase this company's subsidiaries and other private power plants in the Tennessee Valley district.

Aircrafts Supported.

The aviation department continued to receive some support on expectations the forthcoming Presidential message to Congress on naval rearmament would be highly favorable for airplane makers. In addition, backlogs of orders for some of the companies were said to be the highest in their history.

Steels were down with the rest despite a small advance in this week's mill operations, the third consecutive pick-up since the beginning of the lengthy decline. A boost in export copper prices failed to stimulate metals. Rails had to contend with depressing November net operating income statements. Motors were sickly throughout. The White House announced the President would meet with prominent automobile manufacturers and finance company officials Friday. The reported purpose was discussion of means to prevent "high pressure" selling.

The struggle of the French to organize a cabinet caused some market nervousness, it was said, but the French franc rallied in terms of the dollar.

Prominent share losers included Consolidated Edison at 23⅞, Western Union, 26½; American Telephone, 146½; U. S. Steel, 60¼; Bethlehem, 63½; General Motors, 36¼; Chrysler, 60½; Westinghouse, 106¼; du Pont, 117; Santa Fe, 40; Union Carbide, 77; Montgomery Ward, 35¼; Anaconda, 35, and U. S. Rubber, 29⅛.

Homestake Mining was a contrary performer, getting up 1½ at 60½, a new high for more than a year. A shade higher were Douglas Aircraft at 44⅜, Consolidated Aircraft, 18⅜; Savage Arms, 17⅝, and J. C. Penney, 71½.

U. S. Bonds Higher.

Rail and utility loans were depressed by a late selling movement in the bond market today. Some secondary ratings of both groups declined fractions to around 3 points. In the low yield corporate division price changes were mixed. A few early gains were surrendered.

U. S. Governments pushed up to new high levels for the current movement on a relatively small turnover. Closing gains ranged to fifteen-thirty-seconds of a point. There were two or three minor losses in the Treasury list.

Recurrence of weakness in rails was attributed to offerings which were thought to have been dislodged by the recent sharp declines in various junior liens.

Pressure on utility loans appeared to reflect pessimistic appraisal in financial quarters of relations between the Federal Government and the privately owned power companies on the basis of President Roosevelt's move to abolish holding companies and Commonwealth & Southern Corporation's offer to sell its Southeastern operating properties to the Government.

Southern Railway 4s closed at 40½, off 3; Southern Pacific 4½s, 1981, at 59, off 2; International Hydroelectric 6s at 66, off 1¼; Baltimore & Ohio 4½s at 25½, off 2½; Erie refunding 5s, 1975, at 19½, off 1¼; American & Foreign Power 5s at 57, off 1½; Portland General Electric 4½s at 53⅜, off 1½.

The Associated Press utility average declined .6 of a point to 91.3. Rails dipped .2 to 68.7, a new low since December 2, 1933. The industrial average was unchanged. Transactions totaled $7,042,425 par value, against $6,997,325 on Friday.

On the curb exchange utility bonds generally were down fractions to more than 2 points.

Steel Operations Continue Advance

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 2 points to 29.8 per cent of capacity, compared with 27.8 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations were at the rate of 23.5 per cent of capacity while a year ago they averaged 80.6 per cent. The indicated rise is the third successive weekly upturn since the operating rate established a four-year low of 19.2 per cent in the year-end holiday week.

Mutual Agent Writes Million Life Insurance

L. V. Freudberg Is Leading Producer Here of Mass. Mutual Life.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

New paid production in 1937 in excess of $1,000,000 is the record of Leopold V. Freudberg, leading producer of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Washington and life member of the Million Dollar Round Table, of the insurance fraternity. Commenting on this production achievement, Mr. Freudberg stated that his business in 1937 definitely fell into three classifications: Purchase of future security; new insurance to meet higher estate taxes; business insurance.

New insurance written for business purposes has been used to accomplish two objectives; the first for conversion of a stockholder's, or partner's interest in the business into a ready cash market at the death of the stockholder or partner. The second use of life insurance in its application to business is the making available to the corporation, or business, cash with which to absorb the financial shock occasioned by the loss of a valuable executive or technician.

Mr. Freudberg continued during 1937 his classes at the Washington College of Law of which he is professor of insurance law. Discussing the business outlook for 1938, he explained that a number of his clients are replacing decreased commodity values suffered in the 1937 recession by the purchase of additional life insurance. It is his opinion that a large number of business men in 1938 will use life insurance as the only means of replacing the shrunken value in commodity holdings. Mr. Freudberg is planning to attend the annual meeting of the Million Dollar Round Table of the Life Underwriters Association to be held in September, at Houston, Tex.

Keystone Auto Club.

During the calendar year 1937, membership of the Keystone Automobile Club increased by approximately 85 per cent over 1936, it was reported recently by the organization on the basis of final reports for the 12-month period.

In announcing this result, which continues the club's unbroken record of yearly gains, Keystone officials said, "We feel that this is a highly important index of the general economic situation in Washington; and proves again, and quite conclusively, the remarkable business stability with which the National Capital has been so consistently favored."

The Keystone report showed further that the 1937 membership gain was paralleled by a substantial expansion in the facilities of the club's various service departments. Also, it was indicated, further development along this line is contemplated during the present year. Territory of the Keystone Automobile Club of Washington covers the District of Columbia and portions of Maryland and Virginia.

Cotton Lower; March at 8.50

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Cotton moved irregularly in quiet trading today. May sold up from 8.54 to 8.60 and closed at 8.57, with final prices 2 to 4 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 5 points lower, but the undertone was about steady owing to a little trade and commission house buying. Offerings were light. A late rally on a little covering carried the list up to, or within a few points of, the previous closing levels, but slight reactions followed under a renewal of hedging.

Bob Burns Says—

When I see these women wearin' furs out here in this climate where they don't need 'em at all, I often wonder if they give a thought to the poor animals who had to suffer so they could be in style.

The other day I was visitin' some people when the front door bell rang. The husband went out to answer the bell and pretty soon I heard a sickening thud and I ran out in the hall. I came back in and I said to the wife, "Your husband is lyin' unconscious out in the hall with a piece of paper in his hand and there's a big box beside him."

His wife says "Oh, goody-goody, my new hat is here."

Whom do voters favor: Ford or C. I. O.?

As the Ford-C. I. O. controversy awaits review in the Federal Courts, the Gallup Poll asked voters in every State whether their sympathies were with Ford or with the C. I. O. In tomorrow's Post, you will find the results of this survey. Of special interest is the vote of the Nation's automobile owners.

Bridges Urges Ship Workers To Join Forces

C. I. O. Leader Tells Men 'Big Business Is Out to Bust Us.'

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Jan. 17.—Formation of a coalition of 100,000 maritime workers, drawn from all the ports of the Nation, pledged to national unity and economic and political action, moved a step nearer today as their delegates opened business session here.

"Big business is out to bust us," was the opening cry of Harry Bridges, C. I. O. director and West Coast Longshore leader.

"Evidently another economic crisis is in the offing," he declared. "We've got to be stronger."

Bridges' statements were addressed to members of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, representing 8,000 licensed officers.

The conference is aimed exclusively, however, at uniting the unlicensed shipboard personnel—the sailors, firemen, cooks and stewards—under the C. I. O.

Bridges insisted the sea-going unions must resist all proposals to bring to the maritime industry the mediation theories applied to the railway labor act.

"The railway labor act," he said, "through delay, technicalities and complex machinery, breaks strikes before the union gets to the point of striking. That's why they want to apply it to the maritime industry."

Ralph W. Myers, president of the Shipowners Association of the Pacific, told the delegates: "The clenched fist, a club or a gun, will get you nowhere." He said "lack of confidence" had been the stumbling block between employer and employe agreement.

11,000 Helped D. C. Red Cross Work in 1937

Volunteers Contributed '31 Years' of Service, Report Reveals.

On the basis of an eight-hour day, volunteer workers of the District Red Cross, numbering nearly 11,000 workers, performed more than 31 years of service for the year 1937, it was revealed yesterday at the annual meeting of the local chapter of the organization.

The figures were reported by Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of the volunteer service, at a meeting of the chapter at 1730 E street northwest, under the general chairmanship of Gen. F. R. Keefer.

Reporting on the final figures for the 1937 roll call, Marcy L. Sperry, general roll call chairman, said a total of 93,794 members in the chapter represented an increase of 8,672 over 1936. The chapter leads the country in percentage of membership to population and stands fourth in total membership, he said.

Besides regular members reelected to the executive committee, four new members were voted into office. They were Mrs. Norman T. Engle, Earl A. Nash, Oscar Coolican and Mrs. A. C. Read.

A report on first-aid and lifesaving activities of the chapter showed that a total of 157 accident and illness cases was handled by members and 1,872 certificates of first-aid issued.

More than 350 swimming courses were given, the report showed, and 5,892 persons passed the final swimming test. Another 2,524 persons received some swimming instruction during the summer.

Postlude

King-Smith Studio School presents John Martin, of the New York Times, in a lecture on the modern dance Monday night in the Playhouse.

For the sake of all those who wonder what the so-called modern dance is trying to do, one wishes that John Martin, dance critic for the New York Times, had been heard by an audience ten times the size of last evening's gathering in the small King-Smith Playhouse. His background of knowledge and experience, his commonsense and his humor were brought to bear upon fundamentals of the art of dancing and upon principles involved in its contemporary development, and beneath the informality of his exposition lay the structure of persuasive logic.

He made clear the point of divergence between ballet, the fine flower of spectacular dance, and contemporary dancers who are returning to the primary purpose of the dance as a medium for externalization of inner impulses. For the conventional there was a considerable amount of heresy in his statement that the four enemies of the "modern" dance are music, the literary mind, self-expression in the egotistic sense, and the esthetic pose.

Yet each of these points was proved with cogent argument. In the case of music, it has long been obvious that "interpretations" of compositions which were never designed for the dance is a contradiction in terms. The revolt of the modern dancer against this vogue at first went to the extreme of attempting to banish music completely, and the present period of experimentation is concerned with working out new relations between composer and dancer.

As for the literate attitude, Mr. Martin argued that sophistication is at the opposite pole from the spontaneous impulses which seek liberation through the ordered movements of the dance. In place of self-expression he would place the subordination of self to the ideas which are expressed, and for the conscious estheticism of the dance he advocates directness of expression without regard to its conformity with accepted canons of beauty.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents Genia Nemenov and Pierre Luboshutz, duo-pianists, and Lauritz Melchoir, tenor (Ignace Strasfogel, accompanist) in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Monday morning.

Beginning the second hundred of her musical mornings, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend introduced yesterday a new and scintillant pair of duo-pianists, Genia Nemenov and Pierre Luboshutz, in a joint recital with Lauritz Melchior, the stalwart Danish tenor. The collaborating instrumentalists, who have been before the public for only one season, bid fair to rival in popularity any and all of the piano teams now active, for their synchrony is something at which to marvel and they have accommodated their individual styles into a perfect fusion.

In their sympathetic rapport and their mutual concessions, the players have attained a balance of dynamics and a blending of tone most agreeable in artistic effect. Whether in the simple tone coloring of the Bach "Sicilienne" or the brilliant pyrotechnics of the Russian dance from Stravinski's "Petrushka," their readings were perfectly unified. In view of their proficiency, one wishes that they had substituted for two of their numbers music less familiar than the overture to "Die Zauberfloete" and Weber's "Aufforderung zum Tanz."

That they could easily have done so was evident in the remainder of their selections. They played two pieces dedicated to them, a humorous "March of the Pixies" by Partnov and a "Valse Tzigane," by Mischa Levitzki; Rakhmaninov's "La Nuit d'Amour" and Manuel Infante's "Ritmo." Moreover, Mr. Luboshutz had unearthed somewhere and arranged for two pianos a charming eighteenth century conceit, "Les Reverences Nuptiales," by Joseph Bodin de Boismortier, a French contemparary of Bach. Composer of three successful ballet-operas, Boismortier was in high favor at the court of Versailles, where the nobility took particular delight in his numerous pieces written for the combination of musette and vielle.

Lauritz Melchoir, whose heroic tenor voice was in clarion condition, opened his first group with the seldom-heard "Allmaechtiger Vater," from the fifth act of Wagner's "Rienzi," proceeding then to Lembcke's "May Song," Grieg's "A Dream" and Sverre Jordan's "Drink." His second group contained a delightful minnelied of the fifteenth century, Brahms' meditative "Auf dem Kirchhofe," Lange Muller's "Die heiligen drei Koenige," Richard Strauss' "Caecilie" and two of Hugo Wolf's lyrics: "Schon streck ich aus" and "Das Staendchen."

He closed the recital with a ringing projection of the prize song from "Die Meistersinger." It was in the full rondure of his voice that the distinguished tenor was at his best, which is very good indeed. In the softer passages of the lieder his tone was veiled and somewhat lacking in resonance, although his readings were emotionally moving, particularly in "Auf dem Kirchhofe" and "A Dream." A dextrous and considerate accompanist, Ignace Strasfogel, handled the difficult Wolf songs admirably.

WHEN you tell a man who knew the fine whiskies of a generation ago that National's EAGLE is a 1938 model of the pre-war American blends . . . the first thing he says is . . . "Let's try it in a highball."

Of course, there's no tougher test of a whiskey's quality than the "thinning out" it gets in a highball. And when the old-timer sips his highball and finds that even in a deluge of bubbling soda and melting ice cubes National's EAGLE doesn't lose one iota of its rich individuality . . . but keeps the same rich character and perfection of taste it has "straight" . . . watch his eyes light up!
